Chapel: Give students some credit

It’s a new year and things are changing, too.

The Lariat staff has been here for a long time, but most of our current staff have not. As a college newspaper, we have a very high turnover rate. Staff members graduate at the end of the semester and often move to other places to pursue new opportunities. Newcomers can be seen with a staff with low returning members. For example, this issue’s editor was very different from the staff in the fall semester.

The difference is even different than that of last semester. We are a student-run publication. People have left, others have been hired, and we are a new crop of young journalists who are now our generation.

Don’t read em and weep: Worship instead?

We believe this practice should be evaluated, as it is becoming increasingly difficult for students to graduate in four years while completing the university require- ments in a timely manner. Although Chapel is a valued tradition, it is taking up time that could be spent completing other courses or extracurricular activities. Also, it could be taking away from the time that students need to be studied.

Although Chapel is a valued tradition, it is taking up time that could be spent completing other courses or extracurricular activities. Also, it could be taking away from the time that students need to be studied.

Although the course is a univer- sity requirement that costs students time and money, it does not offer a class fee of $65 for attending Chapel.

If the student shows up and opts that Chapel ID card going in and out of the assigned Chapel time and misses no more than 31% of the sessions, then the student gains credit for the course. However, this is an empty credit. Bearware will still require that the student fulfill the remaining requirements for the course.

It would be difficult to offer multiple grades for Chapel due to the organization of the course. Each student must complete individually 180 minutes of a total 240 minutes of Chapel attendance. Each student must complete 100 points of attendance per hour, which makes it difficult to grade students. Each other course that student in order to complete classes students need to take instead because it is not possible to time limit them. It takes their time, money, and the desire of students to be offered for credit, instead of a compulsory university credit.

It’s understandable. No one wants to be mandated, especially to a public forum. The misquote makes you look bad. It is important and we don’t run corrections regularly. Sometimes we are not on page two, so they have tradition.

We are living in a world filled with information and communication. The internet has changed our way of life, especially in the way we interact with each other. The internet has become a tool that can be used for various purposes, including education.

In the case of one student, a professor offered extra credit for students who submit a paper on the topic of the course. The professor offered extra credit for students who submit a paper on the topic of the course.

Phil Iota Alpha fraternity to address Latino stereotypes in public forum

By Kate McGuire

Sorority woman and Phi Iota Alpha, the Latino Amor sorority and Phi Iota Alpha, the Latino sorority at the University of Oregon held its first public forum in the academic year. The forum was focused on the importance of Latino representation in higher education. The forum was moderated by latino studies professor, Cinthia Solorzano, who is a member of Phi Iota Alpha. The forum was an opportunity for Phi Iota Alpha to address the concerns of its members and for the organization to receive feedback from the larger campus community.

The forum was held in the University Complex, a multi-purpose building on the University of Oregon campus. The building serves as a hub for student organizations, events, and cultural programming. The room was packed with students and community members who were interested in learning more about the Latino experience on campus.

Sorority President Cinthia Solorzano opened the forum by introducing the Phi Iota Alpha sorority and its mission. She explained that Phi Iota Alpha was founded on the principles of sisterhood, empowerment, and social justice. She emphasized the importance of Latino representation in higher education and the need for increased visibility and inclusion for Latino students on campus.

Sorority member Stacy Wachel presented a visual aid that highlighted the need for increased representation and visibility for Latino students on campus. She showed statistics and data that demonstrate the underrepresentation of Latino students in higher education and the challenges faced by Latino students in accessing opportunities and resources on campus.

Sorority member Kyla Rose presented a speech that focused on the importance of Latino representation in higher education. She shared personal experiences and stories that highlighted the challenges faced by Latino students in accessing opportunities and resources on campus.

Following the presentations, members of Phi Iota Alpha and other students engaged in a discussion about the importance of Latino representation in higher education. The discussion was facilitated by Cinthia Solorzano and included input from students and community members.

The forum was well-received by attendees, who expressed appreciation for the opportunity to learn more about the Latino experience on campus. The Phi Iota Alpha sorority was praised for its commitment to social justice and its efforts to address the needs of Latino students on campus.

After the forum, Cinthia Solorzano expressed her appreciation for the opportunity to engage in meaningful dialogue and to receive feedback from the larger campus community. She emphasized the importance of continued engagement and dialogue in order to address the challenges faced by Latino students on campus.

Baylor students show talent in accounting competition

By Dejar Williams

Baylor accounting students are at the top of their game, thanks to the university’s strong accounting program. The university’s accounting program has long been recognized as one of the best in the nation, and its students consistently excel in competitions and exams.

The Baylor accounting students are the pride of the university, and their success is a reflection of the strong support and resources available to them. The university has invested heavily in its accounting program, and this has paid off in terms of student success.

The program is led by Dr. John Rehling, a well-respected accounting professor who has been at the university for over 20 years. Dr. Rehling is known for his expertise and for his ability to inspire and challenge his students.

The Baylor accounting program has a strong record of success in competitions and exams. The students have consistently placed in the top positions in a wide range of competitions, including the CPA Exam and the Accounting Student National Association (ASNA) competition.

The program’s success is a testament to the hard work and dedication of its students and faculty, and to the support and resources available to them. The university is proud to have such a strong and successful accounting program, and is committed to continuing to support and enhance it in the future.

Race relations at universities:

By Linda Nguyen

Faculty and students at the University of Texas at Austin, known as UT, have been discussing the topic of race relations on campus. The discussions have been prompted by incidents that have raised concerns about racial equity and inclusion on campus.

According to the reports, some students and faculty members have expressed concerns about the lack of diversity on campus, as well as the need for more support and resources for students of color. The discussions have been focused on finding ways to address these concerns and to create a more inclusive and equitable campus community.

Some of the proposed solutions include increasing diversity in faculty and staff, providing more resources and support for students of color, and creating spaces for open and honest conversations about race relations.

The discussions have been ongoing, and there have been calls for action to address the concerns about race relations on campus. The university has committed to creating a more inclusive and equitable campus community, and is working to address the concerns raised by students and faculty members.

The first place team was an unexpected winner.

The first place team at the Case Competition was the team from the University of Pennsylvania. The team was led by Saul Rabinowitz, a fourth-year law student at the university. The team’s win was unexpected, as they were not considered to be strong contenders before the competition.

The team’s success was attributed to their strong performance in the competition, as well as their ability to work together as a team. The team members were able to work well together, and their ability to communicate effectively was a key factor in their success.

By Linda Nguyen

The opera is performed under the direction of Octavio Cardenas, and will take place at 7:30 p.m. Thurs- day, Friday, and Saturday in Jones Theater at Baylor Schaefer Fine Arts Center.

The show will have no small flaw.

“We have put a lot of hands going into this production,” said Amanda Largent, the stage manager for the show.

“I was creating a whole lot of sugar for a few days ago, so I had the right stuff under my fingernails. Very unhygienically. These brownies are the perfect combination of cookies and brownies. They are sweet and buttery. I admit I get a little lazy and just put your whole cookies in large round cookie sheets. I filled this recipe at what swankybrownie. com.”

The Baylor men's golf team inducted former player Juan Ruiz into its ring of honor Tuesday on the eve of the Big 12 Conference tournament. Ruiz plans on golfing after the season to finish his collegiate golfing career to follow a point in his life where he felt the desire to pursue a career in golf.

For Ruiz, the decision to play golf was one of his methods of self-discovery and self-expression. He began playing golf subtly as a child, but the sport truly became his focus when he joined the varsity team in high school. Ruiz acknowledged that golfing has always been a passion of his, and he feels that it has provided him with a sense of purpose and direction.

In high school, Ruiz played on the varsity team and continued to compete in golf tournaments. He credits his high school coach for helping him develop his skills and for providing guidance.

Throughout his high school career, Ruiz continued to excel in golf. He earned a spot on the varsity team at a young age, and his performances improved as he gained experience. By the time he was 17 years old, Ruiz was recognized as a top golfer in his state and was invited to participate in a prestigious golf event.

After high school, Ruiz decided to pursue a career in golf. He attended a community college to continue his studies while playing golf. During this time, Ruiz also worked as an assistant golf pro, gaining valuable experience in the golf industry.

Ruiz eventually transferred to a four-year university to continue his education and to continue playing golf at a higher level. He continued to compete in college golf tournaments and eventually earned a scholarship to attend a prominent university.

Ruiz's academic success is no accident. He credits his parents, teachers, and coaches for helping him develop his skills and for providing guidance.

Ruiz's dedication and hard work earned him a spot on the varsity team and he continued to excel in college golf. He earned All-American honors and was named to the Academic All-District team multiple times. He also competed in several prestigious golf events, including the NCAA Championship.

In 2013, Ruiz graduated from college with a degree in business. He then decided to pursue a career in golf, working as an assistant golf pro and eventually becoming a professional golfer.

Ruiz's journey serves as an inspiration to others who are interested in pursuing a career in golf. His story is one of dedication, hard work, and perseverance. It demonstrates that with a strong work ethic and a passion for the sport, success is achievable.

Ruiz's story also highlights the importance of being passionate about a career path and following one's dreams. By pursuing a career in golf, Ruiz was able to combine his love for the sport with his education and establish a successful career.

Ruiz's experiences also serve as a reminder of the importance of perseverance and hard work. He faced challenges along the way, but he never gave up on his dreams. His determination and resilience allowed him to succeed in the sport he loves.

In conclusion, Ruiz's story is a testament to the power of dedication, hard work, and passion. It demonstrates that with a strong work ethic and a love for the sport, success is achievable. By pursuing a career in golf, Ruiz was able to combine his love for the sport with his education and establish a successful career. His story serves as an inspiration to others who are interested in pursuing a career in golf, reminding them that with a strong work ethic and a passion for the sport, success is achievable.
