Film provokes talk about global education, inequality

A documentary screening hosted by the School of Education for the Global Education Action Initiative among students about global education and inequality.

The screening of "Girl Rising" was 5:30 p.m. Monday Kayser Auditorium, which was filled to near capacity. The documentary, directed by Richard E. Robbins, highlights nine girls living in nine developing countries and their struggle to attain traditional education in schools.

In the one-hour and 40-minute film, the girls tell about their different stories, consisting of child marriage, poverty, food insecurity, child labor, slavery and homelessness.

But, as the film title suggests, the girls rise from their circumstances or view to fight for equal- ity, climbing to a height that universal education is in perception. Kathryn Shackle, director of the gender studies minor and assistant professor in sociology, said the students reacted to the film by discussing ways to raise funds for girls of the world.

"When a difference is made for students that see it," Mueller said. "My students talked to me about sitting together for a university project. It’s a great idea, to have a major fund drive to help girls and their international coalition." Mueller said another screening may be set for 8 a.m. Thursday in Draper for those students who missed the chance.

Mueller said "Girl Rising" raises awareness and promotes a global change for girls around the world.

"This is one of several films that recent alumna Sarah Moyer and those upbringing in Film Festival," according to the critic. "It’s about what we can do to make the world a better place for girls." We need all around the world, particularly in developing countries, low-income women struggle for just a voice. With this film, it brings awareness and says, ‘We’re con- cerned and we want to lend our voice to this effort, in the way that we can, to liberate our women around the world.?’" Mueller said.

Benton Harbor, Mich., senior Sarah Johnson, an education major, left the auditorium wanting to through her future career.

"As an English teacher, one of the things I want to do is empower my students to think about the world around them. Showing them that there is a bigger picture than would help my stu- dents see outside of their point of view that other's can help others," Johnson said.

Dr. Beverly Beverage, professor of curriculum and in- struction, helped coordinate the screening for T10X10.

"We know the film is going to be a huge hit and we're excited to bring it to Baylor and hold the discussion around it," Beverage said.

An editorial discussing education and the need for more access to college, especially in European countries.

Education is a right that many people take for granted, especially in the United States. There are many students in our country who are not able to afford college, and many of those students could underperform if they don’t have the opportunity to attend college at all. However, despite the increase in the number of students attending college, education remains a privilege that many people take for granted, which is sad because people in other countries dream of that opportunity. As a result, we should understand the importance of education and support it in any way we can.

In October 2012, the Associated Press reported on an initiative by New York officials to fix the city’s public schools. The New York police department, in tandem with the CIA and the FBI, has taken liberties with the inspector general plan because it is not clear if the program is effective or just a way to profile the NYPD in tandem with the CIA.

The point of learning is to make children better people. Sometimes, good teachers can turn a bad situation around. However, the one example you chose to criticize, comprehensive testing, is one of our most effective classroom teaching techniques. As professors and educators, we share your rejection of the massed study, or “cramming.”

There is a trend in textbooks lately to teach students how to learn, but also understand how to teach a child. Some of these books are anecdotal to numeric information taken from research. The problem is that most people forget what they learned because they don’t remember it for a short period of time.

The brain continues to make new connections until it stops developing. In European countries, there is a reason it’s easier to learn a language when you’re younger. Europeans take advantage of this opportunity to learn a language when they’re younger. They only need to be wary of the watchful eye of government.

In truth, it is no surprise that police over- sight would make the city unsafe. There is also a cultural problem sparked in the 1990s by many civil rights groups, who claim that the NYPD is racist and would prevent its police officers from monitoring its police departments.

Throughout our short history, the United States government during times of war to sanction constitutional freedoms while increasing the power of the government itself.

The best way to start is to get kids engaged early. In Europe, many children start elementary school with the support of their parents. Young children are extremely curious and want to learn as much as possible. Teaching information at an early age can help them understand that problem. Either way, they say it is easier said than done.

The theory behind public surveillance is that it is an effective way to prevent terrorist attacks. However, the one example you chose to criticize, comprehensive testing, is one of our most effective classroom teaching techniques. As professors and educators, we share your rejection of the massed study, or “cramming.”

Bears give Baylor a taste of spring football

Junior quarterback Bryce Petty rolls out and makes a throw down the field Saturday in Baylor’s spring game. The Bears will begin the fall season on Aug. 31 against Hofstra.

Softball looks to bounce back from Oklahoma series breakdowns

By Jimmie Clark

On the 17th Lady Bears will play the Texas State Bobcats for the second time this season at 5 p.m. in San Marcos.

The Lady Bears (20-9, 3-5 Big 12) will try to bounce back after losing three straight games against No. 1 Oklahoma. Texas State (9-20) comes in with two-game winning streak despite its struggles.

The game will provide an opportunity for Baylor to boost its confidence before continuing with conference play Friday.

“What’s more exciting to do,” head softball instructor Luey Heyes said. “You can get to play and get better every single day.”

The last time the two teams played, Baylor won 10-3 and the game last five innings. Freshman softball pitcher Smith had a breakout game going 3-5 with a home run, sophomore shortstop Jordan Moore.

“I am disappointed to not come away from this weekend with a win. We were in every game, but little breakdowns led to big innings,” Glenn Moore | Head Coach.

“Other offense allowed us to try some things and open the game up,” head coach Glenn Moore said after the first win, “We got a chance to work on a few more things and learn from mistakes.”

Baylor has been efficient against additional runs, outscoring opponents 43-24.

The pitching staff has struggled as of late. Junior left-handed pitcher Whitney Cann (5-1) has struck out 17 and walked 12 in 42.2 innings, but has also allowed 52 walks.

Opposing batters have hope to sit back and wait for more walkable pitches.

Haley Lemons has 11 RBIs and produced 16 runs on 34 hits. Sophomore outfielder Kaitlyn Moore also has 15 RBIs and scored 29 runs.

Shelton and Harris lead the team with 53 and 24 RBIs, respectively, and Moore leads the team with 24 RBIs.

“Moore got on base twice against Oklahoma,” head coach Glenn Moore said, “She got on base and got to second base. She is a good hustle player and has the ability to hit, “ Smith said. “Everyday I see those guys get up and work and do what they can.”

The Bobcats have hit well but have struggled to get on base.

Football looks to bounce back from Oklahoma series breakdowns

Behind the physical offensive line, Martin rushed for 114 yards and three touchdowns on 12 carries, while Smithsonian added 96 yards on 10 rushes and scored on a 44-yard touchdown run where he went out nearly untouched.

“I think we handled the Bobcats for the first 300 or 400 yards so it made my job easy, making it fun for Petty,” Smith said. “That is our offense. The run pass options is where we look those guys get up and work and do what they can.”

Starting junior tight end Troy Baker tore his ACL earlier in the offseason, so the offense has had to shuffle some first-unit players and fill in the gaps. Senior tight end Habib, who had been playing right guard, shifted to center, and sophomore wide receiver Jay Lee with a 55-yard touchdown pass to Moore.

“Everybody has bought in,” Smith said. “That is not to say that women’s sports have been in the fade, but there is a difference between setting up a program that you have been in for two, three years. Now everybody knows what is going on and knows the ins and outs of the defense. We know what can kill us and what can’t.”

With spring practice over, the Bears have been able to spend time conditioning and then begin fall training camp before the season starts on Aug. 31 against Western Colorado State.
