Pantry door open for HIV sufferers

By Rebecca Frazier

Through the Red Door Project, Central Texas Metropolitan Community Church is attempting to help economically-burdened members with AIDS stay true to providing services to people suffering from HIV.

The church has a food and beverage pantry meant to bring new knowledge to those who can use its resources once a month.

Many girls growing up are taught that the world is a safe place, men are the protectors and women are not expected to need to fight for their own rights. However, in the history of women in America, it is evident that this is not the case. Women are often portrayed as weak, fragile, and unable to handle the responsibilities of life. This is why it is important for girls to learn about the history of women's rights and the progress that has been made. It is also important for girls to understand that they are just as capable as men, and that they can achieve anything they set their minds to.
Book celebrates 50 years of feminist revolution

In her new book “Lean In,” Facebook Chief Operating Officer Sheryl Sandberg explores the issues women face in the workplace and family. The book has been influential in changing the consciousness of women’s rights. In its current application to education, work, faith and society.

Book's anniversary at 12:30 p.m. Friday in the Jesse H. Hahn Center

This week, Baylor will recognize the 50th anniversary of “The Feminine Mystique” by Betty Friedan. The book, published in 1963, is considered groundbreaking by many scholars.

The book changed the consciousness of the world, according to Dr. Hope Koch, associate professor in the information systems program.

The book’s reception in 1963 was that Friedan was only looking at other white suburban women, according to Van Davis, assistant director of wellness.

“Women only do things we know how to do, ” she said.

Men were educated and had ambitions, but they did not feel like they had options. The second wave was a right to consciousness. They wanted to identify and fight against gender stereotypes. This problem studied by Friedan was the discontent of women who did not have 50 years ago.

Orchestra treats school kids to classic tunes, instruments

By Adam Harris  Reporter

For the 87th year, kids from the greater Waco area will file into Waco Hall to experience a concert of classical music performed by the Baylor Symphony Orchestra.

Today, house will fill the streets in front of Judge Baylor’s statue to receive what could be the student’s first taste of live symphony music as performed by Baylor’s award-winning group of musicians.

Stephan Heyde, director of orchestral studies, has coordinated the tradition since he arrived at Baylor in 1986.

He said the goal of the concert is to introduce the kids to a new culture they might not find in their situations.

“This is an unrepeatable tradition since 1946,” Heyde said. “There’s a lot of people who say, ‘Do you still do these children concerts?’ And I think that’s something special. “

The performance features music popular in the classical music genre. Heyde said it also provides students an opportunity to step into the role of conductor and lead other students into the performance. One of these conductors, 11-year-old stand-up Stephanie Colburn, is looking forward to her first year of involvement with the concert.

“It’s a great thing for kids in the area because it gives them awareness about musical instruments and gets them interested in the music,” Colburn said. Colburn discussed one point in the concert at which the different parts of the orchestra hold up their instruments to show what parts of the group each sound is coming from.

Colburn will conduct a reading put together by Garrison usine.

“It’s a great thing for kids in the area because it gives them awareness about musical instruments and gets them interested in the music,” Colburn said.

The arrangement by William Colburn combines pieces that are prevalent in pop culture.

“We did this summer, and Pre- liminary Joyce came to me and asked if I could write a piece that was melody-wise, as we wanted to pick music that was really well known amongst the literature to the orchestra,” William said.

The three pieces chosen by William were Carl Orff’s “Magnum” (Fortunat), Giacomo Puccini’s “Musetta” from “La Boheme,” and Richard Wagner’s “Ride of the Valkyries.”

“Not only are they prominent in the literature, they’re also really well known amongst the general public,” William said.

For Williamson, dressing the music was the difficult part. He said he found a challenge in creating transitions between the three pieces. It was difficult to figure out how to work from one piece to the next and make it cohesive.

“I (Heyde’s) job is to pick those pieces and then those would be talking in between them by this narrator,” Heyde said.

The concert will include narration by XXKK-TV Channel 25 news anchor Ann Harder.

Along with the narrator, the performance will feature dancers acting out a routine from Pyotr Tchaikovsky’s “The Nutcracker” while the orchestra performs the movement titled “March.”

The performers and children alike were talking in between the pieces, with the music.

“Not only are they prominent in the literature, they’re also really well known amongst the general public,” William said.

Planning for the event began during the spring semester, Heyde said, and gives the parties involved plenty of time to prepare for a full year of events.

“The event is sponsored by the Waco Symphony Association as well as the school districts involved with the program. Heyde said the pieces we selected and then a developable product is presented, giving them a chance to prime the students before attending the performance.

“We are always like a teaching plan for the first six weeks of school,” Heyde said.

With almost 8,000 students set to attend the three concerts in Waco Hall, the concert presents the performers and children alike with an enriching and fulfilling display of classical music.

“When you go out on the stage and see all of these kids out there, it’s a different experience than when you’re playing in front of professors and colleagues,” William said. “It just inspiring you into what you’re doing.”

Two ‘I Love Lucy’ episodes come back in color this December

LOS ANGELES – There was never any doubt that “The Lucy Show” was all for color. But for those whose imaginations need some color, CBS will air in December a one-hour special featuring two never-before-colorized classic episodes of the 1950s series.

The “First Christmas Special” will consist of the silent version of “Christmas Episode II” and the spaghetti-tight classic, “Such Is Italian Movie,” airing Friday, Dec. 22, at 8 p.m. ET/PT. The show – which featured Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz in their first appearance as Ricky and Vivian – also includes Italian Movie, “Burana (O, Fortuna),” Giacomo Puccini’s “Nessun Dorma,” and Puccini’s “Dance of the Putti,” while the orchestra performs the movement titled “March.”
