CAST members of “Shipwrecked” wear many hats in this month’s theater production.

Darden said, “This is the foundation of my life. It’s a painful situation.” he stated, “for an unabashed fan like me, it’s a painful situation.,” gospel music was not readily available in the city he grew up in.

The museum has discussed moving an entire African-American neighborhood from Philadelphia. The museum, under construction on the National Mall in Washington, is scheduled to open in 2015.

What started out as a fascination of gospel music turned into a project fueled by Baylor associate professor Robert Darden’s passion for keeping it alive.

The Royce-Darden Collection of black gospel music is set to be a cataloging project with the staff at Moody Library and the Royce-Darden Collection.

Some doctoral students may find themselves in a precarious position until they turn 26. "After an abundance of caution, the chapter was suspended pending an investigation,” said Baylor Law School lecturer David Henry, the faculty adviser for the chapter. "They found that there was no problem.”

Pi Kappa Phi has returned to campus in full with no sanctions upon the conclusion of an investigation into activities concerning pledges.

"I think the fraternity was more than they would any other chapter or any other organization because they were affiliated with us. At that time, when they lifted the suspension, they didn’t find anything.”

"They notified our president at the time via phone call, and we got an email from our director of accountability and education from our national office. “They found essentially nothing.” said it wasn’t anyone affiliated with us. At that time, when they lifted the suspension, they didn’t find anything.”
Feminist movie ratings make no sense

Editorial

Since its inception, the Motion Picture Association of America has been infamous for its role in censoring content to make it more palatable while protecting its reputation as a business. In addition, the MPAA's ratings system keeps a close eye on the content that may impact its image.

In the United States, films are rated for adult content, language, violence and thematic elements. This includes the use of about two dozens of a film in the film with the only cause célèbre.

In October, four cinematex in- management is careful to launch a new rating system that is specifically geared towards..If a movie doesn't have enough hype, they think it gives a them. However, the system was created in a tongue-in-cheek fashion from an earlier one that possesses those requirements - the film must contain at least two cinematic characters. You must talk to each other and you must discuss something other than your latest word, life..I push forward because God

The Baylor Lariat on Facebook

Social Media

Follow and Tweet us

Like the Baylor Lariat on Facebook

Ad Representative

Editor

Copy editor

Sports editor

Multimedia Editor

Newspaper

Assistant city editor

Photo editor

Baylor Lariat

Ad Representative

Ad Representative

Ad Representative

Ad Representative

Opinion

Friday, November 15, 2012

2

Feminist movie ratings make no sense

Front Page

If the trailers truly want a def- end to the conundrum is empow- ered. Two of the most common reasons that women cannot make movies include: imperfect visual, fiction that does not make sense to the female audience and values.

However, though these broad defi- nitions are still quite broad and intri- guing for any movie to im- press these feminists. Hence, the system is quite simple. It uses four criteria in order to assess whether a film is suitable for women. These criteria are:

1. Does the film contain at least two female characters, regardless of whether they are similar or not? Does the film make you feel like they're making a public scene or — if you are like me — hacking in a tongue-in-cheek fashion from

2. Are the female characters empowered or does the film make them appear powerless? Do the movies discuss rape, harassment or sexual assault in a positive way? Does it make a female character the victim?

3. Are the movies concerned with feminist values? Do the movies discuss a woman's role in society? Are the movies concerned with a feminist perspective or do they fail to recognize the importance of women's rights?

4. Are the movies concerned with gender equality? Do the movies discuss the importance of women's rights in society? Are the movies concerned with gender equality or do they fail to recognize the importance of women's rights?

The answers may vary, but it is important to remember that for this class is just one stepping stone to the ultimate goal of saving souls. I have empowers them at all.

If the theaters truly want a def- end to the conundrum is empow- ered. Two of the most common reasons that women cannot make movies include: imperfect visual, fiction that does not make sense to the female audience and values.

However, though these broad defi- nitions are still quite broad and intri- guing for any movie to im- press these feminists. Hence, the system is quite simple. It uses four criteria in order to assess whether a film is suitable for women. These criteria are:

1. Does the film contain at least two female characters, regardless of whether they are similar or not? Does the film make you feel like they're making a public scene or — if you are like me — hacking

2. Are the female characters empowered or does the film make them appear powerless? Do the movies discuss rape, harassment or sexual assault in a positive way? Does it make a female character the victim?

3. Are the movies concerned with feminist values? Do the movies discuss a woman's role in society? Are the movies concerned with a feminist perspective or do they fail to recognize the importance of women's rights?

4. Are the movies concerned with gender equality? Do the movies discuss the importance of women's rights in society? Are the movies concerned with gender equality or do they fail to recognize the importance of women's rights?
New heights: Army ROTC trains with other universities

By Rebecca Fuerst
Staff Writer

After a day of training on a high rope course just off campus Thursday, Baylor Army ROTC cadets will once again be out of their typical environment this weekend as they attend field training exercises at Fort Wolters in Mineral Wells. They will work with cadets from Texas Christian University and the University of North Texas, practicing skills they will need to know as leaders in the military.

“They are putting into practice the things that they learn throughout the semester — in terms of tactics that allow us to assess their ability to lead small units at the squad level,” said Maj. Santos Orlando, battalion commander of Baylor Army ROTC. “This is the smallest unit that they’re going to lead.”

This weekend’s training will start with a dawn and a daytime land navigation task, where cadets will be given a number of points on a map. They will try and use the skills they’ve learned in ROTC to figure out a route to those points.

“It’s very challenging,” Arroyo said. “A lot of people are just afraid of the dark, and it’s in the woods.”

“It allows them the opportunity to lead other cadets they don’t know, because when they go to a unit as a lieutenant they won’t know anyone.”

Maj. Santos Arroyo | Battalion commander of Baylor Army ROTC

Brevard freshman and Army ROTC cadet Braden Burgess said he is excited for the weekend’s training. This will be his first experience with this event.

“I know there’s still a lot to learn, but I’ve learned a whole lot,” he said. “It has been a lot of fun and a good experience.”

“I think the hardest thing is getting the cadets to do what you want,” he said. If you have a mission to go out and do, explaining that to them and communicating that to them is on the same page as you and in the same mindset makes it a challenge, but leadership has always been kind of a natural thing for me. That’s why I chose the Army.”

Cadets will also be practicing squad tactics. On the ground they will use sticks and rocks to illustrate to the rest of squad what the mission is all about.

They will also practice squad ambushes, squad attacks, reconnaissance missions and how to react to an improvised explosive device.

“Those are the basic skills that everyone in the Army needs to know,” Arroyo said. “We look at the leadership behavior that we desire for an officer in the Army, so they’re doing their missions and re- evaluating people to get it done, while look- ing at how well they communicate, as interpersonal skills, how well they can create a team and get it done, their sound judgment and overall safety.”

Cadets will be given feedback on where they can improve after the training is over.

New Braunfels junior and Army ROTC cadet Tara Hutchinson has completed three weekends of field training so far in her time at Baylor. There is one for each semester.

“They’ve been good experiences,” she said.

Hutchinson said she has seen herself improve each year in the field training exercises.

“Last summer I didn’t know what I was doing, and you slowly start to learn more and progress,” she said.

Hutchinson’s favorite thing about the training is acting as an infantry unit trying to complete a mission.

She said it’s fun and enjoyable.

“Squad with a bunch of random people that you don’t know, so you have to learn what they do best, what their strengths are, their weaknesses and how you can help each other out,” she said. “I think it will still be good to be thrown in there when you have to learn about the other people quickly, and learn how you guys can work together as a team.”

Deadline for fall, 2014 admission is February 15, 2014

www.baylorlariat.com

EXAMINE THE EVIDENCE

Making the decision to attend law school is huge. Deciding which one to go to can be intimidating.

At South Texas College of Law/Houston you will find:

- an exceptional facility
- an advocacy program rated No. 1 in the nation by the Blakely Advocacy Institute
- affordable tuition rates, as evidenced by a “Best Value” private law school ranking in The National Jurist magazine
- the Randall O. Sorrells Legal Clinic, which houses more than 10 direct-service clinics, academic externships and a vibrant volunteer pro bono program
- an award-winning legal research and writing program
- a broad and flexible curriculum
- a helpful and knowledgeable staff
- more than 30 student organizations that provide a nurturing social environment and opportunities for community service
- a downtown location close to major law firms and corporations for enhanced job opportunities

Deadline for fall, 2014 admission is February 15, 2014

www.stcl.edu
Baylor Law’s small class size builds relationships

By Paula Ann Solis

Staff Writer

The Ferrell Center will celebrate its 25th birthday on Sunday, December 8. Baylor Bear and Nicole Epps will be honored for their special relationships with the Baylor Bears Athletic Department.

Baylor Law School enables our students to have access to a unique policy at the law school — no office hours. Every law professor-student relationship is based on the illusion of the professor-student relationship.

When you show your student ID to our professors, they know you on a personal level and will help you meet all of your goals.

The Ferrell Center has a similar situation occurring at Baylor Law School, with a drop in applications close to 20 percent. Neeley said a similar situation was occurring at Baylor Law School, with a drop in applications close to 20 percent.

“I want you to grab a quality experience. “If you want a quality experience, you’re going to get one,” Neeley said.

“I’m not only a goal but part of the trend of declining law school applications. “If both of my parents are not Baylor graduates, I would always be familiar with this campus because I made friends there that ever happened to me at Baylor and became students.

Others have welcomed national artists such as George Strait, Dolly Parton and Keith Urban.

“Since both of my parents are Baylor graduates, I would always be familiar with this campus because I made friends there that ever happened to me at Baylor and became students.

“Since both of my parents are Baylor graduates, I would always be familiar with this campus because I made friends there that ever happened to me at Baylor and became students.

“I was really impressed when I came on my tour,” Glisson said. “They also knew my name and were expecting me. What really sealed the deal though was sitting in a class and seeing the professor-student relationship. Other law schools don’t have that and it helps us motivate our students. We get a fuller experience here.”

“Though I had to be honored for the 25th time on the last day of Welcome Weekend, I would always be familiar with this campus because I made friends.

“Since both of my parents are Baylor graduates, I would always be familiar with this campus because I made friends there that ever happened to me at Baylor and became students.

“I was really impressed when I came on my tour,” Glisson said. “They also knew my name and were expecting me. What really sealed the deal though was sitting in a class and seeing the professor-student relationship. Other law schools don’t have that and it helps us motivate our students. We get a fuller experience here.”

“I was really impressed when I came on my tour,” Glisson said. “They also knew my name and were expecting me. What really sealed the deal though was sitting in a class and seeing the professor-student relationship. Other law schools don’t have that and it helps us motivate our students. We get a fuller experience here.”

“I was really impressed when I came on my tour,” Glisson said. “They also knew my name and were expecting me. What really sealed the deal though was sitting in a class and seeing the professor-student relationship. Other law schools don’t have that and it helps us motivate our students. We get a fuller experience here.”

“I was really impressed when I came on my tour,” Glisson said. “They also knew my name and were expecting me. What really sealed the deal though was sitting in a class and seeing the professor-student relationship. Other law schools don’t have that and it helps us motivate our students. We get a fuller experience here.”

“I was really impressed when I came on my tour,” Glisson said. “They also knew my name and were expecting me. What really sealed the deal though was sitting in a class and seeing the professor-student relationship. Other law schools don’t have that and it helps us motivate our students. We get a fuller experience here.”
‘Shipwrecked’ sets sail for theater department

By Adam Harris
Baylor Theatre’s constantly moving department has been re-hearing for the next show for the last four months. The play, “Shipwrecked!” is directed by John Michael Sefel, and is a tale of a fantastic voyage and is a tale of a fantastic voyage gone wrong. The story follows Abilene junior Seth Monhollon, played by Louis de Rougemont, as told by himself, “was cast for this particular play was unique. The audition process was to test the folly and an Entertainment: The Amazing Adventures of Louis de Rougemont (as told by himself), “ was cast for this particular play was unique. The audition process was to test the folly Left: Texas Gator and Seth Monhollon gaze into a mirror as their characters in Baylor Theatre’s upcoming performance, “Shipwrecked!” Above: The cast of the show rehearses together before opening night on Tuesday Left: Joanna Hughes greets Texas Gator as a happy dog, one of the characters in the play. The play opens on Tuesday Nov. 19 through Nov. 24.

Top left: Texas Gator and Seth Monhollon gaze into a mirror as their characters in Baylor Theatre’s upcoming performance, “Shipwrecked!” Above: The cast of the show rehearses together before opening night on Tuesday Left: Joanna Hughes greets Texas Gator as a happy dog, one of the characters in the play. The play opens on Tuesday Nov. 19 through Nov. 24.

Top left: Texas Gator and Seth Monhollon gaze into a mirror as their characters in Baylor Theatre’s upcoming performance, “Shipwrecked!” Above: The cast of the show rehearses together before opening night on Tuesday Left: Joanna Hughes greets Texas Gator as a happy dog, one of the characters in the play. The play opens on Tuesday Nov. 19 through Nov. 24.

Top left: Texas Gator and Seth Monhollon gaze into a mirror as their characters in Baylor Theatre’s upcoming performance, “Shipwrecked!” Above: The cast of the show rehearses together before opening night on Tuesday Left: Joanna Hughes greets Texas Gator as a happy dog, one of the characters in the play. The play opens on Tuesday Nov. 19 through Nov. 24.
Bears ready for showdown with Texas Tech

By Shawn Brown Senior Writer

Following a 41-12 win over No. 10 Oklahoma, Baylor moved into the top five in the BCS for the first time. With higher rankings come higher stakes, and there are few stages more fitting for high-stakes football than AT&T Stadium in Arlington.

No. 5 Baylor football (8-0, 5-0) travels up I-35 to Arlington to take on Texas Tech (7-3, 4-3) in a matchup at the home of the Dallas Cowboys.

Baylor is coming off an authoritative win over No. 10 Oklahoma on Nov. 7. The Bears defeated the Sooners behind five all-purpose touchdowns from junior quarterback Bryce Petty and a dominant defensive performance. The Baylor defense held OSU to 257 total yards and 87 rushing yards.

After starting the season with seven straight wins, Tech has struggled of late. The Red Raiders have lost three straight games: at No. 15 Oklahoma and against No. 10 Oklahoma State and Kansas State in Lubbock.

In the three losses, Tech was outscored 139-90.

For the first time this season, the Bears lead the nation with 122.3 rushing yards per game, which ranks 105th.

Tech is coming off a tough loss at the hands of Kansas State Saturday. Mayfield threw two interceptions in the loss, including a pick six to Kansas State safety Ty Zimmerman. The Tech defense allowed Kansas State to rush for 291 yards on 45 attempts, including five rushing touchdowns.

Baylor's offense is the highest-rated offense in the BCS. The Bears average 61.0 points per game, which is 9.0 points per game better than the No. 2 Florida State Seminoles.

Baylor backs Petty and Oregon's LaMichael James lead the nation with 332.1 passing yards per game. Petty has excelled himself into rusher of the year consideration. Petty has thrown for 25 touchdowns and only one interception in eight games. He has also rushed for at least one touchdown in seven straight games.

"Baylor has all the right tools, one, we're going to have to prepare for just like anybody else," Petty said. "We're going to have to be prepared on offense, defense and special teams just like we face the best teams in the conference because right now that's what they are."

Senior running back Lache Seastrunk was pulled in the second quarter against Oklahoma after inciting a tug of the Eye of the Tiger. Seastrunk is listed as doubtful with a sprained knee.

When Martin and Seastunk went down against Oklahoma, sophomore freshman utility back Shock Linwood was given a shot. Linwood finished with 182 yards on 23 carries in the win. "They're planning on giving me more playing time against Tech," Linwood said. "I'm going to have to step it up more and do more things that I wasn't able to do the last few weeks."

With Seastunk and Martin questionable, Linwood will receive more carries. Red-shirt freshman running back Devin Chafin will also likely receive more carries. Senior wide receiver Ameer Goodrich may also receive carries out of the backfield.

For the first time this season, Baylor will face an equally potent passing offense. Texas Tech's duo of freshman quarterbacks Baker Mayfield and David Webb have led the Red Raiders to the most prolific passing offense in football. The Red Raiders pass for 408.2 yards per game, the most in the nation.

"It makes it fun because the opposing quarterbacks are young," senior defensive lineman Terrance Lloyd said. "I don't know if they've been in a situation playing a team so good as we are and a good defense. We just have to get after them and make them rattle back a little bit."

With Mayfield and Webb inexperience, the duo is turnover-prone. Tech is bottom 10 in the nation in turnover margin, while Baylor ranks top 10.

An opportunistic defense will be able to cause problems for the Tech offense.

Texas Tech has a much less diverse offense than Baylor. The Bears have a balanced rushing and passing attack, while the Red Raiders lean solely on the pass.

Texas Tech's rushing offense averages 122.3 rushing yards per game, which ranks 105th.

Baylor ranks top 10 in the nation in passing defense, so something will have to give on Saturday. Baylor ranks ninth in the nation in total defense, and first in the Big 12.

In the Big 12, the scoring defense ranks second, while the Tech defense ranks last.

Baylor ranks top 10 in the nation in turnover margin, while Tech is bottom 10 in the nation.

Many questions were answered after Baylor's defensive performance against Oklahoma last weekend. There is a chance that this turns into a shootout, but Baylor is the heavy favorite in win.

No. 5 Baylor will take on Texas Tech at the AT&T Center in Arlington. The game will be nationally broadcast on Fox.

Junior quarterback Bryce Petty rushes the ball against Oklahoma on Nov. 7. in Baker's 41-12 win. The Bears are ranked No. 5 in the BCS standings and are heading to Arlington for a showdown with Texas Tech in AT&T Stadium.

The W. Dial Black Family Lectures

“Cancer Drug Discovery Using Fragment-Based Methods”

Monday Nov. 18, 2013 5:45 pm
Waco Convention Center in the McLennan Room

Reception starting at 4:30 pm
Hilton Three-Rivers Ballroom

Stephen W. Fesik, Ph.D.
Professor of Biochemistry, Pharmacology, and Chemistry
Ornith H. Ingram, II Chair in Cancer Research
Vanderbilt Ingram Cancer Center
Vanderbilt University School of Medicine, Nashville, TN.
Lady Bears rout Nicholls State 111-58

In the second game of the season, the No. 9-ranked Lady Bears dominated unranked Nicholls State University with a 111-58 win on Thursday at the Ferrell Center. The Lady Bears have scored more than 110 points in every game thus far, averaging 110.5 per game.

"You just have to give Baylor the credit in terms of their personnel, the depth they have, the ability to, in a good way, they can just wear you down," Nicholls State head coach Delilah Frazier said. "They're outstanding. They're young and the game experience, which is no small feat.

Coming out of the first half of the game the Lady Bears led 54-29. Senior guard Odyssey Sims led the team in points with 14 at the end of the first followed by freshman forward Nina Davis with nine.

The second half of the game, however, belonged to Davis.

"I was a little nervous when it first started out, but once I started playing and my game started flowing I was a little more comfortable and I just went from there," Davis said. "When I was younger I was a point guard. I've always had a dribbling ability, so I just take it and go.

In her first start of the season, Davis was named player of the game, with 11 rebounds and 28 points, making it her first double-double in her Baylor career.

"I was very happy for her," Sims said. "I wanted her to score as many points as she could. It's always fun to watch another teammate get a double-double. But to mention it twice is a little unusual. We thought she deserved both. She's the most versatile player we have.

The Lady Bears started their season ranked No. 10. After a blowout win against Grambling State University, they moved up to No. 9.

Next week, women's basketball will face the unranked Rice Owls. Rice is 2-1 on the season with wins over Prairie View A&M and Texas Southern, with its lone loss coming to McNeese State.

"Rice is going to present a challenge for us because first of all they have more experience than we do," Mulkey said. "They're very well coached. They're three-player is going to be the best player we've played to this point and it's going to be a game.

The Lady Bears play Rice University at 6 p.m. Monday in the Ferrell Center.

"I hope that the fans will come out Monday because really we don't need to see that front row empty," Mulkey said. "It means something to us to have good fan support. I know its football season. I know its Monday night football, but we really need a good crowd Monday."
Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | NOVEMBER 15, 2013
www.baylorlariat.com

DOCTORAL
from Page 1

there is material out there that people are still finding," Logan said. One of the main issues the library staff ran into with the project was the issue of copyrights on the music. The laws vary from state to state and each song or piece has to be looked into individually.

"It is a big project and one that does not exist anywhere else, as we had to work extra on it. I think we've created a very fascinating and valuable project," Logan said.

Daniels' work was part of the Air Force, which was racially integrated in 1948. As a result, Daniels said he had plenty of African-American friends as a child and would hear gospel music in their homes. Though he has no personal memory of it, Daniels and his parents informed him of his early fascination with Mahalia Jackson's Christmas album.

He went on to write the gospel music col-munications for Billboard magazine. Though he has worked on several genres, he contintinues to write on black gospel music, now in book form. Daniels said he cannot recall a specific time when his fascination turned into his calling, but that firmly believes that the collection and preservation of this music is his calling.

"Some of the greatest music on the planet are those fragile 45s of a guy singing the spirituals or gospel songs during the worst of the Jim Crow oppressions," Daniels said. "Pretty powerful stuff!"

Daniels said he hopes to make this mu-ical resource available. The collection continues to grow as he struggles to create it available without breaching copyright laws. Daniels said music is not only an important part of history, but also important in present times.

"We're still in a civil rights movement, but it's not just for African-Americans," Daniels said. "This music sustained African-Americans in the time of their greatest need. When they were fighting against one of the world's largest armies, when they had protection in the courts, not any protection by law. But they had their voices, their brains and they used freedom and gos-pell songs as a weapon."

Logan, though, he said he admits he is not particularly fascinated by the music, said he agrees with Daniels that the collection is meaningful.

"The importance of the project is we hope to save music that would otherwise disappear," Logan said.

A former student of Mahalia Jackson's, Daniels said he was inspired to continue the project by Jackson's spirit.

"It is a big project and one that does not exist anywhere else, as we had to work extra on it. I think we've created a very fascinating and valuable project," Logan said.

Daniels' work was part of the Air Force, which was racially integrated in 1948. As a result, Daniels said he had plenty of African-American friends as a child and would hear gospel music in their homes. Though he has no personal memory of it, Daniels and his parents informed him of his early fascination with Mahalia Jackson's Christmas album.

He went on to write the gospel music col-munications for Billboard magazine. Though he has worked on several genres, he contintinues to write on black gospel music, now in book form. Daniels said he cannot recall a specific time when his fascination turned into his calling, but that firmly believes that the collection and preservation of this music is his calling.

"Some of the greatest music on the planet are those fragile 45s of a guy singing the spirituals or gospel songs during the worst of the Jim Crow oppressions," Daniels said. "Pretty powerful stuff!"

Daniels said he hopes to make this mu-
ical resource available. The collection continues to grow as he struggles to create it available without breaching copyright laws. Daniels said music is not only an important part of history, but also important in present times.

"We're still in a civil rights movement, but it's not just for African-Americans," Daniels said. "This music sustained African-Americans in the time of their greatest need. When they were fighting against one of the world's largest armies, when they had protection in the courts, not any protection by law. But they had their voices, their brains and they used freedom and gos-
pell songs as a weapon."

Logan, though, he said he admits he is not particularly fascinated by the music, said he agrees with Daniels that the collection is meaningful.

"The importance of the project is we hope to save music that would otherwise disappear," Logan said.

A former student of Mahalia Jackson's, Daniels said he was inspired to continue the project by Jackson's spirit.