...JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY

An emotional tribute to the slain President, John F. Kennedy, is expressed in this image from The Baylor Lariat, Texas A&M University's student newspaper. The article is a reflection on the service held for the late President, reflecting on his assassination and the national mourning that followed.

The article begins with a quote from President Kennedy, "Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask what you can do for your country.

Waco Mourns for John F. Kennedy

Many of the churches in Waco held memorial services for the late President John F. Kennedy. Although the forms of worship were different, the congregations had one thing in common—a deep sense of loss at the death of the President.

Last Saturday, a group of 300 persons attended a memorial service held at the First Baptist Church at 10 a.m. Monday. About 50 people attended a memorial service at 12:15 p.m. Monday, held in the old State Capitol where she knelt for the dead.

The Community Pays Last Tribute to a President

In the days following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, the nation and the world paid their respects in various ways. In Waco, Texas, a memorial service was held at the First Baptist Church. The service was attended by a large crowd of mourners, who came to pay their respects to the fallen leader.

The service began with a reading from the Bible, followed by a prayer for peace and unity. The service concluded with the playing of "Amazing Grace" and "The Star-Spangled Banner." The crowd was silent as they listened to the music, their hearts heavy with grief.

The casket of President Kennedy was brought to the church by the caisson, which had been driven through the streets of Waco earlier in the day. The procession was led by the mayor and members of the city council, who marched in formation to the church. The casket was placed on a bed of marble and draped with the American flag.

The service was attended by many dignitaries, including the governor of Texas and the mayor of Waco. The service lasted for about an hour and was followed by a period of quiet reflection.

The people of Waco felt a deep sense of loss at the death of President Kennedy. The city had been affected by his assassination, and the memorial service was a way to honor his memory and to come together as a community.

The service was a solemn and moving event, a testament to the respect and admiration that the people of Waco held for the fallen President. The community came together to pay their respects, to remember, and to stand united in the face of tragedy.
Lariat Sees Tragedy

The assassination of President John F. Kennedy took Dallas by shock, but those around me when I learned he had been shot were still in a festive mood.

As the afternoon passed, it was learned that Lee H. Oswald, a 24-year-old Dallas man, had worked at the building from which President Kennedy was shot.

The Dallas Police Department, under the leadership of Captain Will Fritz, had peacefully, effectively and firmly brought about the solution of the case.

And it must take a great nation to understand the necessity for that peaceful, effective and firm solution.

It takes a great man to pursue the Presidency with the knowledge that the American people will consent to, and that the people will consent to, and that the dedication with which he pursued it.

It is now up to the people to realize that there are no easy answers to the problems of a great nation, and to reject the shallow offerings of these individuals. And those who have offered these answers should hang their heads and be shamed.

The few who understood the great man who could perpetuate itself the late John F. Kennedy are the ones who will be his greatest admirers. That great man will be missed, and that great man will be missed, and that great man will be missed.

America's Part
In Assassination

Baylor students found it difficult to express their feelings about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Several students, who spoke to the Lariat, said they were shocked by the news.

"It was a shock," said one student. "I didn't even know he was shot."

"I was just in shock," said another. "I thought it was just a movie."

Ruby's Sister Tells About His Reaction

DALLAS—The sister of Jack Ruby, the man who killed Lee Oswald Sunday morning in the basement of the Dallas police station, described her brother as a very religious man who loved all Presidents.

"He loved every President—that's the problem," said Mrs. Grant.

"My father died five years ago and (Ruby) took it (Kennedy assassination) harder than that," she said.

Mrs. Grant told a close personal friend in Austin, who is an entertainment columnist for The Austin American-Statesman that her brother notified her of the President's death Friday and that she could tell he was crying.

"I heard him saying about Jack and the Kennedy slide— he couldn't get his words out," she said.

She said her brother called her six times Saturday and each time asked if she had any news.

The last time he called, at 12:30 a.m. Sunday, he was asking her how she was going to take coffee to police and hospital personnel and to police stations and radio station KLBJ.

Mrs. Grant said she heard him say she heard about her brother was shot at the same time the governor was wounded on the television screen.

As Mrs. Ruby thanked Mrs. Roberts for her information, he said, "I had to wind up this way, " he said.

"He kept talking about Jackie and the White House, " Mrs. Roberts said.

"He was clean with himself, always well-groomed, and he had no car, no credit cards," Mrs. Roberts said.

"We tried to talk to him but he wouldn't," Mrs. Roberts said.

"He said he was closing his club," she said.

"You wouldn't get a good grunt," she said.

"How could anybody go into a stuffy club when we all know the price of drinks is right the day before, and then at the next intersection, it was from the same hot wings restaurant, " Mrs. Roberts said.

A horn honked up ahead and a woman quickly rocked her stroller wagon back into the traffic stream. A sign on the way home read: "Victory over Communism."
They would not be back until the next Tuesday morning. The dormitories overnight without being dismissed. There were rumors that Baylor would dismiss 350 students that had left. Students were dismissed on Monday morning with the routine check, which further complicated the problem of the Cotton Bowl. It is expected to be rescheduled for either Jan. 15 or Jan. 21.

Students Extend Vacation Week

Removes some thick fog at the University. The fog cleared Monday morning with the routine check. Some 35 women signed out of the dormitories overnight without being dismissed. Dean of Students W. C. Perry has said that a routine check would be made Tuesday morning with dormitory directors and wings directors to see how many men did check out.

Back No Violation

As far as we have heard, none of the other schools in the Southwest Conference are handling the situation. There is no violation. All that is expected is that tests would be postponed. There will be no makeup tests when students return.

The Waco Symphony Orchestra's concert at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday will be held with President John F. Kennedy's assassination in mind. A program of patriotic music, as well as a song dedicated to the late President, will be performed.

Profs Reschedule Several Exams

The test scheduled for Monday was postponed and whether or not it would be rescheduled is dependent upon a Navy victory over the Army. If Navy becomes unavailable, the game will be a bowl game. If the game is not played, the winner might not be invited to a bowl. If the game is played, it will be played on the Monday after Thanksgiving. For the Southwestern Conference, the Cotton Bowl will probably be changed to play on that occasion. The Waco Symphony Orchestra will hold the concert on the day before President Kennedy's assassination.
