Don't talk to strangers.

The idea of "stranger danger" often leads people to ignore the fact that children, as well as adults, are more likely to be sexually assaulted by a family member, friend, acquaintance or someone in authority that the victim knows than by a stranger.

According to the 2000 report "Sexual Assault of Young Children: As Reported to Law Enforcement" by the Bureau of Justice Statistics (U.S. Department of Justice), 93 percent of juvenile victims and 72.6 percent of adult victims knew their offenders. The younger the victim, the more likely it is the offender is a family member.

"No one likes to think that it happens here, but the reality is that monsters don't always sleep under the bed," Amy Perkins, executive director for the West Advocacy Center, said. "Sometimes they live down the hall."

Democrats ruining court system

On Election Night, 2008, newly elected President Barack Obama predicted that Republicans would fight him on any issue he did not agree with. In fact, action, not politics was said.

But the Wall Street Journal editorialized on the first stimulus bill was passed (with support by Obama, claim that Republicans are simply engaging in a “political power play” by passing “the silliest, most knee-jerk, least helpful new spending”.

Democrats argue that more rules. Presidential nominees to the courts to become more political Rick Emanuel, head of the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, is in the hot seat this term.

The specific school and college man- dated attendance policies are sufficient for encouraging students to come to class.

In an unprecedented move, the Senate Democrats two weeks ago engaged in the “clear option” to change the Senate rules. Presidential nominees for most federal judicial positions will now require 60 votes to proceed.

Indeed, simply a majority is all that is needed to move to a con- ference. The Senate Democrats' actions came as the president was trying to appoint more than two justices to the court that reviews most of the government's regulations, the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals.

It sounds like the Obama of 2008 has arrived. In the last week was a dangerous blow to the Republican Party.

For example, by penalizing students who miss class, professors are penalizing students for some- thing that most likely happen.

BU Campus Kitchen volunteers help Wacoans, those in need find next meal

By Kyle Lott Kennett

Students from the Baylor chapter of Campus Kitchen Projects have found a way for Baylor students to be fed and help others simultaneously.

Lott: Well, this summer I went to the boot camp for Campus Kitchens in Washington, D.C. At the boot camp for Campus Kitchens, we're just trying to reduce food waste while empowering student leaders. We're the first ever to run a kitchen on a college campus, and we've been able to serve the Waco community.

Brantley: Yeah. I believe you're absolutely right. The importance of cooking.

Lott: I love to cook, so it's nice to do something that helps people while doing what you love. This really gives me an opportunity to do that and to teach other people as well. A lot of people who come in don't know how to use a knife, so I can give them pointers on how to cut those people.

Brantley: Well, you know that you're cooking for people who otherwise wouldn't be eating. It kind of gives you a little ambition.

Lott: Absolutely gives me an opportunity to do something that helps people. My second year I was a kitchen manager, so I actually led the kitchen shifts. I am the kitchen director, so I oversee the kitchen managers and don't have a specific cooking shift, but I'm in charge of making sure the kitchen is clean and how food is infused. I'm able to go through and see what food they're doing and help people who are in difficult circumstances, and we try to utilize all the extra assets that Baylor has to bring food to those organizations, and from there it moves on to those people.

Q: What are some of the extra assets? Baylor has to offer?

Brantley: It's called “Storing room recoveries,” which happens every day of the week. We deliver on Tuesday and Thursday at 3:30, and it helps a lot. They'll pick up as much as 150 pounds of fresh food that wasn't touched — and then we'll give it to organizations in the community.

Q: Where does Campus Kitchen get the rest of the food you use?

Brantley: We have a community garden call Fresh Trent and James Avenue, and throughout the year — I don't know how they do it — there are fresh vegetables growing. I've been on Mondays and is brought to the kitchen to be used during our cooking shifts.

Lott: We also get a lot of food donated from food banks, and we use that to create meals for Wacoans and Family Abuse Center.

Q: What is the process for volunteering?

Brantley: It's really simple. To come help out. They'll usually send an email asking us what we want to volunteer. Volunteering is non-competitive. You can come once you've never been to campus and help out in any situation.

Lott: Are there any reason you can't participate in Campus Kitchen?

Brantley: Yeah, I believe you're supposed to try your best. The goal of lifting others is to help other people serve others. My personal testimony — I've traveled a lot, and during the summer of 2010 I served in a mission abroad on a hospital shift in Africa working with the dying staff. So I'm coming to America, and I saw how many hungry and needy people were here in America, and specifically in Waco. I believe that we have a command to love our neighbor as ourself, and that means to feed our neighbors and help them out and everything. God placed a mission on our back door. Waco is a very impoverished community, and I think that as Christians we need to be helping each other out in that way.

Q: What do you say to students who are interested in either joining or just learning more about Campus Kitchen?

Brantley: I tell them to think about the last meal they had, and the fact that they're provided for, but some people just don't have that and don't know where their next meal is coming from — or we can't remember the last time they ate something. Right here on Baylor's campus, they have the opportunity to go and cook — even if they aren’t the best chef in the world. We can help some families or do a dinner run. They can find something, and it’s not just something very simple they can help on the campus community.
The usual glut of holiday movie releases will be landing in theaters in a new wave, let by the coming of the latest hit films (Mark Ruffalo and Keira Knightley in “The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug,” to be released Dec. 13.)

But it stars Joaquin Phoenix and Rooney Mara, it’s a December movie if ever there was one. You can tell because two Oscar winners (Meryl Streep and Julia Roberts) are playing mother and daughter. In other words, it’s December.

The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug — Although the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences once rewarded director Peter Jackson with an array of honors for his “The Lord of the Rings” trilogy, its generally new wave critics say that a movie with hobbits, elves and dragons is more about making money than winning awards.

Ferguesson said the staff at Dichotomy has a different vibe and offers different products than anyone else around here. “There’s always a little bit of a learning curve there. ”

While there is always concern when opening a new enterprise, their passion and ultimate confidence will sooner or later bring them success. If you have too much hesitation or too many nerves regarding anything, you probably shouldn’t be doing it. “We decided to just dive in.”

The new shop became a lively meeting and sitting area with couches and tables and also offers a large outdoor patio where patrons can enjoy their drinks and food. There are also seating areas in both the Capital Building and the famous Alice Building.

Ferguesson said the staff at Dichotomy is focused on the quality of beverage and food. “It’s a wonderful place, Dichotomy has a comfortable, unique environment in which to enjoy your wallet.”

When there is more turkey on the table, the focus turns to the theater. In other words, it’s December again.

This is the time of year when Hollywood releases a glut of expensive product on a suspicion public.

You stuff your face at Thanksgiving, now it’s time to stuff your other sense at the movie theater.

No really anybody understands why a group of highly paid and presumably highly educated movie studio executives insist on releasing on releasing too many of their best films in the same month, resulting in a scary competition for space in the cine- ma多席 multiply and for those precious discretionary dollars in our wallet.

But every year, we are left to agonize over which movies to watch. One of the benefits of living in a suburban area, which is Hollywood, is to be exposed to something other than mainstream or West Coast oriented fare.

Ferguesson said, the staff and owners of Dichotomy are enjoying their move from a small corner in a local art gallery to their own large-scale store.

While there is always concern when opening a new enterprise, their passion and ultimate confidence will sooner or later bring them success. If you have too much hesitation or too many nerves regarding anything, you probably shouldn’t be doing it. “We decided to just dive in.”

According to research compiled by the Baylor Counseling Center, students who get six or fewer hours of sleep per night have a GPA that is 0.3 points lower than those who get eight or more. The kind of impairment from lack of sleep is comparable to drinking two or three beers. Wood said the end result could be reduced academic performance, reduced academic performance, and a reduced academic performance. Sleep deprivation is especially detrimental for people with existing mental health status, such as depression.

Students with any health condition, sleep deprivation will exacerbate these symptoms. Wood said.

The reasons why students aren’t sleeping very well, sleep is essential for health, Wood said, but should be because if students plan their day and get help, they can have a better sleep and a better day.

Baylor’s Miller Athletic Complex is 6-12 months. He said though the stadium is being built quickly, the pre-planning of the club continues. ClubCorp will open the club on the days.

Now you’re at the right time, if you will, for everything to come together. The club is open for the students to get something after the stadium. Yeoward said. "We’re in the club business and we have successful university clubs in a number of other stadiums such as in Texas and other states," Yeoward said. "So when we heard about the project being announced a year or two ago, that when we reached out to the university to suggest that maybe we could help them with a club in the stadium." ClubCorp has clubs in college clubs such as Texas Tech University, The University of Texas at Austin and Boston College. ClubCorp is also responsible for the operation of major business clubs, country clubs and social clubs. Wood said the average time for developing and opening a club is 6-12 months. He said though the stadium is being built quickly, the pre-planning of the club continues. ClubCorp will open the club on the days.

In addition to operating the club, ClubCorp will also be responsible for catering in the pre- game spaces in the stadium. The club will be available to customers in the meetings and events. Wood said he expects it to open a week or two before the first football game.

", each semester for the study, and for all students who enroll in the classes. Beginning with the fall semester, the report will be published annually to the public. The purpose of the study is to provide information about the prevalence, prevalence, and patterns of sexual assault and violence on college campuses in the United States. The study includes data from a national sample of over 30,000 college students who completed a confidential interview. The results of the study indicate that sexual assault and violence are serious and widespread problems on college campuses and that significant efforts are needed to prevent and address these issues. The study also highlights the importance of research in this area as a tool for informing policy and practice. The study is published by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and is available online at www.cdc.gov/violenceprevention/collegestudents.html.

The study is based on data from the 2011-2012 National College Health Assessment (NCHA), which is a large-scale survey of college students in the United States. The NCHA includes questions about sexual behavior, sexual assault, and violence, as well as other health and social issues. The data collected in the NCHA is used to inform research, policy, and practice in the area of college health. The study is funded by the National Institute of Health and the National Institute of Mental Health.

The study shows that sexual assault and violence are common on college campuses. Among female college students, about 26% report sexual assault in their lifetime, while about 5% report sexual violence in their lifetime. Among male college students, about 10% report sexual assault in their lifetime, while about 1% report sexual violence in their lifetime. The study also shows that sexual assault and violence are more common among students who are members of underrepresented groups, such as minority students, LGBTQ students, and students with disabilities.

The study identifies several risk factors for sexual assault and violence. These include alcohol and drug use, drug and alcohol use, and mental health problems. The study also highlights the importance of providing support and resources to survivors of sexual assault and violence, as well as offering prevention and education programs to all students on college campuses.

The results of the study are used to inform policy and practice in the area of college health. For example, the study has been used to inform the development of new policies and programs to prevent sexual assault and violence, as well as to provide resources for survivors. The study has also been used to inform the development of new research and to inform the design of new interventions to prevent sexual assault and violence.

The study is an important resource for researchers, policymakers, and practitioners in the area of college health. The study provides valuable information about the prevalence, prevalence, and patterns of sexual assault and violence on college campuses. The study also highlights the importance of research in this area as a tool for informing policy and practice. The study is an important resource for addressing this serious and widespread problem.
