Baylor extends reach to D.C.

By Evacuators Stomer

Baylor seeks to establish greater presence in Washington, D.C. through a multiphase series of events.

"Our mission statement says that we educate men and women of worldwide leadership, and service," said Karla Keiko, vice president for board and executive affairs and chief compliance officer. "One of the most effective places to have impact as a leader or servant-leader is in Washington, D.C.

Baylor is starting the second phase of what Loeper is referring to as the launch. Loeper said the end goal of phase two is to establish a physical presence in Washington. In order to do so, there are several events taking place this month to announce Baylor’s presence in D.C.

"Those are two about broader public announcement of what we’re doing and starting to expand the actual physical presence of what we are going to do in D.C. Loeper said.

For the past few months, the focus has been on building relationships, relationships with the White House, the Department of Justice, the Department of Education, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development. These are in constant communication about the reports that have come forward and the actions taken.

Editorial
A controversy is brewing in the White House and it has nothing to do with partisan politics. Condoleezza Rice, who has been named to cover the stories of the White House, is frustrated with their lack of access to President Barack Obama.

The White House has made it a habit of declaring an event to be closed to the media for national security reasons. However, the official White House photographer, Pete Souza, will take pictures of the event that was closed to the press and release them later.

This practice is a major setback in the freedom of the press. The White House media cannot be allowed to be present at an event, but Pete Souza also should not be allowed to take photographs and release them to the public via Instagram, among other outlets.

With the White House electing to close off events to the media and opting to release photographs that were taken by their own photographer, this is fueling its own propaganda. This practice is eerily and frighteningly similar to dictatorships.

The government should not control the image of the president. The White House needs to show the public what it is doing and allow the public to have their government covered by independent photographers who are paid to cover the events of the White House.

This is a major indicator that the White House is going down a slippery slope. The White House should not turn over journalist’s camera lens, sure enough as if they were placing a hand over journalists’ cameras lens, instead the administration is blocking the public from having an independent voice to determine the functions of the executive branch of government.

The media has to cover events and new symptoms of events that photographs were banned from, including meetings with African American faith leaders, Pakistani虛拟中国人, and members of the Congress Hispanic Caucus.

In all, the White House photographer recorded the event and posted the pictures on social media.

The Baylor athletic department released student ticket prices for pick-up at 10 a.m. Monday in the Blisz Student Center for the 2013 season. During the Iowa State game, the Bears went out of their way to be there, supporting the student body. If the Bears don’t show that they have a consistently rabid fan support, they will not be as successful as they could be.

Baylor football is well on the upswing. The Bears were ranked No. 2 for the first time in the Belen era. Additionally, Baylor has increased their radical support despite the past two classes and will hopefully be able to show that they have students for years to come.

With demand at an all-time high, its time for Baylor to charge students for what it is worth.

Baylor Urban Missions is giving the Waco kids a chance to have fun while learning more about Christianity and the Christmas story.

The Baylor children’s ministry group, Kings Club, will be visiting with Mission Waco. Kings Club will be offering a range of activities for the kids to interact, teach and play with the children from the Kate Ross Apartments.

Kings Club, a group that meets on Wednesdays, and Kings Club at Kate Ross, which meets on Thursdays, are two of the many groups that want to make a difference in the lives of children in inner city Waco.

With the end of the semester approaching, the two groups are planning something special for their kids to enjoy, "Kings Club and Kings Club at Kate Ross want to do something for the kids to get them into the Christ-mas spirit," said Ashten Oxford, co-leader for Kings Club.

Waco weather: it’s complicated

``Weather for a few days, and then temperatures do not always stay your mind. "Our main purpose is to build relationships with these kids and cultivate an understanding of Christianity in them."

For Rabke, helping these kids participate and learn about the Gospel is one of the best things about being a part of the group.

"It's given me a great community to be a part of," Rabke said. "Being able to see these kids and help them in any way possible is such a rewarding thing.""
The arts don’t just improve academic performance; they also provide a sense of community and belonging, which is crucial for young people's well-being. According to a study by the National Endowment for the Arts, young people who participate in the arts are less likely to engage in risky behaviors such as substance abuse, dropping out of school, or getting into trouble with the law. In fact, the arts can help keep them on track academically and socially, and can even improve their mental health.

For example, the arts can help children learn important life skills such as discipline, goal-setting, and self-expression. They can also help children develop creative thinking and problem-solving skills, which are essential for success in all areas of life. Furthermore, the arts can help children develop a sense of accomplishment and pride in their work, which can lead to increased self-esteem and confidence.

In conclusion, the arts are not just a form of entertainment; they are an important part of education and a vital tool for helping children thrive. As Dr. Gudel said, "The arts are an important part of the educational experience. They help students to learn, to express themselves, and to develop the skills they need to succeed in life."

On April 28, center Isaiah Austin entered Baylor’s media room to announce his decision. He was a fresh-faced 19-year-old with a fresh shoulder in the lead-up to the decision.

I wasn’t sure if Isaiah would be able to come back. Isaiah has a tough stomach, but I was optimistic he could. Isaiah and I talked a lot about his decision. I won’t comment on the decision, but Isaiah has done a great job of preparing himself.

“Isaiah has done a great job of maturing and being a great teammate,” Drew said. “He hasn’t played as much as he would have liked, but he’s been accustomed to not winning.”

The only loss for Baylor this season was a loss to then No. 8 Syracuse on Dec. 16, to surpass Angela Tisdale’s all-time Baylor assist record of 493. She averaged 6.38 assists per game over 23 regular season games to surpass Angela Tisdale’s all-time Baylor assist record of 493.

The one part of Isaiah’s game that has fallen off mightily is his numbers. Since the loss, Syracuse has gone on to a quick 7-1 start despite the loss. Isaiah has virtually removed his face from the game. It’s not a surprise that head coach Scott Drew said, “I just have to get back on the court. Isaiah is a great teammate.”
