Lending a paw

Houston senior Suliana Arius has a love for dogs. Saturday at Fuzzy Friends Rescue with her service fraternity, Alpha Phi Omega. Members

Baylor Who?! Center shares faiths

Those driving down Bosque Boulevard might notice a large sign at the intersection of 25th Street that reads “Baylor Who?! Center” standing over what was once a pharmacy. Baylor Who? has been a part of Waco for more than 35 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’i is a religion that was founded in the 1800s by Baha’u’llah in Iran. The religion focuses on the importance of unity and equality among human beings, and teaches that the divine religion of the world represents different stages in the central revelation of God’s will.

Major religious leaders such as Jesus, Muhammad, Buddha and Krishna are believed by Baha’is to be divine messengers sent by God. The Baha’is to be divine messengers sent by God. The Baha’i religion recognizes other faiths and does not seek to convert people from their current beliefs.

Baha’is are known for their commitment to service and community work. They believe in the Oneness of God and the universality of all religions. Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’is are known for their commitment to service and community work. They believe in the Oneness of God and the universality of all religions. Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’is are known for their commitment to service and community work. They believe in the Oneness of God and the universality of all religions. Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’is are known for their commitment to service and community work. They believe in the Oneness of God and the universality of all religions. Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’is are known for their commitment to service and community work. They believe in the Oneness of God and the universality of all religions. Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’is are known for their commitment to service and community work. They believe in the Oneness of God and the universality of all religions. Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.

Baha’is are known for their commitment to service and community work. They believe in the Oneness of God and the universality of all religions. Baha’is have been a part of Waco for more than 50 years, and to this day, people of the Baha’i faith are still active in the Waco community.
Suing players defeats Little League mission

When it comes to youth sports, coaches often extend beyond the field of play. Coaches are supposed to teach the game, help with healthy life skills, teach teamwork and responsibility. These lessons are apparently lost on Alan Beck.

"There are certain risks associated with baseball. It pains me to know that there are baseballs flying about, bats roaring down the ground and, yes, possibly a helmet on the field after a game-winning run," Beck wrote.

You can imagine the dramatic scene: Bottom of the 9th, two outs, bases loaded. It's a tense situation.

The runner that scored the winning run, in traditional cel - eration, went to coach Beck and beckoned him to the ground, earning the victory for his team.

Coaching is not about that at all. Rather, it's about teaching their team valuable life lessons, the kind that last a lifetime.

Beck, the boy's father, told KCRK, a TV station in Stateness - o, that he can't afford to fight the case much longer and that he has already spent $4,000 with - out stepping foot in a courtroom. Beck should drop the suit and remember why he wanted to be a coach in the first place.

If you are wronged by chance, then don't let it run on and dominate your life. It's called letting go.

The situation that you're in now is exactly what the law states. This is precisely what the law was made for. Therefore, to bankrupt it would mean the law means nothing to the child. I'm sure that it's possible, but it is, it must be done.

You can't kill your baby.

1. Should the court honor Mr. Munoz's wishes

Yes: 83.8%

No: 16.2%

2. Explain your reasoning.

"Mother and child should be allowed to pass away peacefully and with dignity, together, as nature intended, and in the family's request. Not surrounded by controversy, not attached to this situation when it says, "A person may

Beck should sign up again to coach because he wants to help kids on the other team. But many people and his four family friends filed suit in his own place, according to the lawsuit, he thought the whole thing was a joke. Sadly, he was wrong.

"I don't think you meant to harm him," Garty Goldman, Beck's attorney, told KCRK. "But this wasn't a part of the game. A guy who volunteers his time to coach should not be subjected to this."
Habitat builds Waco from ground up

By Lauren Tidmore

Unplugged

The University Student Union will host Unplugged at 6 p.m. on Thursday in the Bear for tickets. This free event will feature a variety of musical performances and fun. For more information, contact Student Activities Union Office or visit Facebook and Twitter.

Bearathon

Students interested in participating in Bearathon will host the annual Student Activities Union Bearathon this Saturday at the Gary W. Lewis Student Center. The event will feature 10 events in total:

- 5K Run
- 10K Run
- Half Marathon
- Marathon
- 50K Run
- 100K Run
- 200K Run
- 300K Run
- 400K Run
- 500K Run

Registration is open through the Student Activities Union Office and can be purchased at the Gary W. Lewis Student Center. All events will begin at 6 a.m. on Saturday, March 1, and will conclude at 6 p.m. on Saturday, March 1. All proceeds will be donated to the United Way of Waco, Texas.

Habitat for Humanity works to build a better world for people in need through the construction of affordable housing. Since its inception in 1976, Habitat for Humanity has built over 400,000 homes in 186 countries and territories around the world. The organization works with individuals and families to provide safe, decent and affordable homes in partnership with community leaders and volunteers.

In Waco, Texas, Habitat for Humanity has been active since 1987 and has built over 100 homes for low-income families. The organization is currently working on several projects, including a new home for a single mother and her children and a home for a family who lost their home in a house fire.

Habitat for Humanity Waco is planning a groundbreaking event for a new home on Saturday, April 16, in honor of Habitat’s 25th anniversary. The event will feature a ribbon-cutting ceremony, a tour of the home site, and light refreshments.

The organization also has plans to host several events throughout the year, including a fundraiser and a community clean-up event. For more information, visit the Habitat for Humanity Waco website at wacohabitat.org.
Grads take Pinterest success, create shopping site

Cinema owner association to limit length of movie trailers

The Baylor Lariat

Tuesday | January 28, 2014

Details in fabric
Grads take Pinterest success, create shopping site

The company steadily increased, and then, as Henry said, "the Oswego hit." They had one picture of a girl wearing a sweater, and it went viral," Henry said. "Millions of pins went out and we sold hundreds of the one sweater. That really gave us the capital to get going.

The tribal print movement called the "Santa Fe Sweater" generated 727,800 pins on Pinterest within the first month and continues to draw in more to Paizlee's website. It quickly sold out, but Paizlee's customers kept coming back.

Henry said she estimated 80 percent of customers return to the website, which is high compared to other online fashion retailers. "We had one picture of a girl wearing a sweater, and it went viral," Henry said. Paizlee's customers keep coming back.

"Every price we put on an item, we try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

With low-cost prices, shoppers are less hesitant and more likely to buy online. Shoppers might not know if it is a quality product until they hold it in their hands, but they know it's inexpensive enough that they can test the product out, Henry said.

"The majority of our customers are repeat customers," Henry said. "So after bringing them in with a basic price, they see the quality is worth the price."

Assuring shoppers of a product's value is a common challenge online retailers face, Dr. Chris Pullig, a department chair and associate professor for Baylor's marketing department, said. Pullig said department stores have cut staff and has enriched their online retail model and overcome the challenge of缺乏 of tangible products.

"Every price we put on an item, we try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

Pricing and online reviews are an important factor for online stores and can influence a customer's decision to purchase a product. "Any sort of negative reviews should be addressed before the product is shipped. We try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

"The environment is rich for any type of retailer to do fairly well," Pullig said. "When you think of the influence of Pinterest, it enables the smaller retailers to have a large reach."

While Henry said they have considered opening a physical store, they have not yet decided to do so. "We had one picture of a girl wearing a sweater, and it went viral," Henry said. Paizlee's customers keep coming back.

"The majority of our customers are repeat customers," Henry said. "So after bringing them in with a basic price, they see the quality is worth the price."

Assuring shoppers of a product's value is a common challenge online retailers face, Dr. Chris Pullig, a department chair and associate professor for Baylor's marketing department, said. Pullig said department stores have cut staff and has enriched their online retail model and overcome the challenge of缺乏 of tangible products.

"Every price we put on an item, we try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

Pricing and online reviews are an important factor for online stores and can influence a customer's decision to purchase a product. "Any sort of negative reviews should be addressed before the product is shipped. We try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

"The environment is rich for any type of retailer to do fairly well," Pullig said. "When you think of the influence of Pinterest, it enables the smaller retailers to have a large reach."

While Henry said they have considered opening a physical store, they have not yet decided to do so. "We had one picture of a girl wearing a sweater, and it went viral," Henry said. Paizlee's customers keep coming back.

"The majority of our customers are repeat customers," Henry said. "So after bringing them in with a basic price, they see the quality is worth the price."

Assuring shoppers of a product's value is a common challenge online retailers face, Dr. Chris Pullig, a department chair and associate professor for Baylor's marketing department, said. Pullig said department stores have cut staff and has enriched their online retail model and overcome the challenge of缺乏 of tangible products.

"Every price we put on an item, we try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

Pricing and online reviews are an important factor for online stores and can influence a customer's decision to purchase a product. "Any sort of negative reviews should be addressed before the product is shipped. We try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

"The environment is rich for any type of retailer to do fairly well," Pullig said. "When you think of the influence of Pinterest, it enables the smaller retailers to have a large reach."

While Henry said they have considered opening a physical store, they have not yet decided to do so. "We had one picture of a girl wearing a sweater, and it went viral," Henry said. Paizlee's customers keep coming back.

"The majority of our customers are repeat customers," Henry said. "So after bringing them in with a basic price, they see the quality is worth the price."

Assuring shoppers of a product's value is a common challenge online retailers face, Dr. Chris Pullig, a department chair and associate professor for Baylor's marketing department, said. Pullig said department stores have cut staff and has enriched their online retail model and overcome the challenge of缺乏 of tangible products.

"Every price we put on an item, we try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

Pricing and online reviews are an important factor for online stores and can influence a customer's decision to purchase a product. "Any sort of negative reviews should be addressed before the product is shipped. We try to make sure it's an amount we would pay for it," Henry said.

"The environment is rich for any type of retailer to do fairly well," Pullig said. "When you think of the influence of Pinterest, it enables the smaller retailers to have a large reach."

While Henry said they have considered opening a physical store, they have not yet decided to do so. "We had one picture of a girl wearing a sweater, and it went viral," Henry said. Paizlee's customers keep coming back.
For this Sunday’s game, Moore-A player, as well as the city of Denver, is ready for its Super Bowl moment. John Elway’s first championship as a quarterback and current executive vice president and chief operating officer of the Denver Broncos has been a monumental task awaits the Seahawks. Henry Sotsuda signals thumbs up and almost. But once you get into it, it’s overwhelming energy and it’s just like overwhelming. There’s so much energy. There’s so much excitement. It was so loud. We’re not usually a subway place as well in our stadium. But when we’re on our home turf, we’re usually a subway place as well. It was so loud. We’re not usually a subway place as well in our stadium. But when we’re on our home turf, we’re usually a subway place as well. There were a lot of fans there. It was such an electrifying performance. It was such an electrifying performance. Moore-A player, as well as the city of Denver, is ready for its Super Bowl moment. John Elway’s first championship as a quarterback and current executive vice president and chief operating officer of the Denver Broncos has been a monumental task awaits the Seahawks. Henry Sotsuda signals thumbs up and almost. But once you get into it, it’s overwhelming energy and it’s just like overwhelming. There’s so much energy. There’s so much excitement. It was so loud. There were a lot of fans there. It was such an electrifying performance. It was such an electrifying performance.
Project Homeless Connect will reach out to community members.

By Rebecca Finnin

Project Homeless Connect will provide Waco's homeless the Thursday with the opportunity to access different social services and resources from most local organizations and nonprofits.

The Heart of Texas Homeless Coalition will host the event at the Waco Convention Center from 9 a.m. to noon Thursday. Multiple booths will be set up at the convention center for services such as medical resources, job resources, immunizations and beauty treatments.

Anyone seeking to participate in the event may drop off items to the convention center, Wednesday afternoon and Thursday at the event itself.

Michael Orndoff, Vice Chair of the Heart of Texas Coalition, said people are welcome to arrive at 8:30 a.m. or 9 a.m. on Thursday to be trained and help out as volunteers.

"Project Homeless Connect is specifically designed to provide resources to people who are chronically homeless and are at an onsite homeless liaison for Waco's Independent School District. "These people are often adult women, women and veterans. They are the kind of people you see in the parks, or in the alleged tent city that, depending on whom you talk to, we do or don't have." The event has been advertised to the community via multiple organizations and nonprofits around Waco.

Annually the city of Waco Project Homeless Connect to conduct a 'point in time' census, which is a count of those who live homeless in the city in order for the community to receive federal funding from the department of Housing and Urban Development.

"What Waco has decided to do is in many of them other communities, to provide resources that may help stop people out of chronic homelessness, along with coordinating the count," Orndoff said.

Volunteers will perform a needs assessment for each homeless person.

The person will then be escorted through booths by volunteers to receive resource specific to that persons situation.

"Essentially our goal is to engage these folks with resources that will benefit them and move them to a place of homelessness," said Orndoff.

The turnout for the event has been approximately 100 volunteers and 900 workers each year.

Typically around 100 volunteers and 900 workers each year.

TUESDAY | JANUARY 28, 2014

The Baylor Lariat

Denver police: Student fire apparent suicide attempt

By Stephen Candeloro

TUESDAY | JANUARY 28, 2014

The Baylor Lariat

Associate Press

WESTMINSTER, Colo. — A 16-year-old boy set himself on fire at a suburban Denver high school on Wednesday in an apparent suicide attempt that left him critically injured, authorities said.

The boy didn't make any threats before setting the fire in the bathroom at

Stanley Lake High School at about 7:15 a.m., police said.

A student was able to see a fire entiquer in the stall before it engulfed the student, authorities said.

Several other students were in the cafeteteria at the time. Investigations were Conducted through the school with bombs and detection dogs as a precaution, and no discoveries were made.

Investigations are also taking stiding, facility members and family members to find out what happened, she said. "We didn't have any indication that there's any threat against the high school. We do believe that this is a suicide at-temples," she said.

The boy has been named, Spychala didn't know how the student set the fire.

The high school was closed for the day.

One hundred and thirty-nine students, faculty members and staff members were evacuated, she said. Authorities said 668 no-votes. One vote would have been needed.

The resulting no-vote, which led to the ond vote. "It was a very hard decision for each homeless person.

"I feel blessed," said Jobson.

The current room, Jobson said, is a much needed facility for our soccer players. It's okay in the park, or in the alleged tent city that,

"The dream has become a reality and

By Paul Jobson

Paul Jobson, brought Baylor's soccer team from Page 1

The Heart of Texas Homeless Coalition

The Heart of Texas Homeless Coalition will host the event at the Waco Convention Center from 9 a.m. to noon Thursday. Multiple booths will be set up at the convention center for services such as medical resources, job resources, immunizations and beauty treatments.

Anyone seeking to participate in the event may drop off items to the convention center, Wednesday afternoon and Thursday at the event itself.

Michael Orndoff, Vice Chair of the Heart of Texas Coalition, said people are welcome to arrive at 8:30 a.m. or 9 a.m. on Thursday to be trained and help out as volunteers.

"Project Homeless Connect is specifically designed to provide resources to people who are chronically homeless and are at an onsite homeless liaison for Waco's Independent School District. "These people are often adult women, women and veterans. They are the kind of people you see in the parks, or in the alleged tent city that, depending on whom you talk to, we do or don't have." The event has been advertised to the community via multiple organizations and nonprofits around Waco.

Annually the city of Waco Project Homeless Connect to conduct a 'point in time' census, which is a count of those who live homeless in the city in order for the community to receive federal funding from the department of Housing and Urban Development.

"What Waco has decided to do is in many of them other communities, to provide resources that may help stop people out of chronic homelessness, along with coordinating the count," Orndoff said.

Volunteers will perform a needs assessment for each homeless person.

The person will then be escorted through booths by volunteers to receive resource specific to that persons situation.

"Essentially our goal is to engage these folks with resources that will benefit them and move them to a place of homelessness," said Orndoff.

The turnout for the event has been approximately 100 volunteers and 900 workers each year.

Typically around 100 volunteers and 900 workers each year.