Baylor Police Departmen announces new chief

By Berinca Flannery

Chief Wigmil Baylor's newly appointed chief of police, said he is taking his new post as an opportunity to improve communication within and around Baylor. Wigmil took the position of interim chief in August following the retirement of Jim Doak in July. He said his new role differs from his past post because he now oversees all the services provided by the police department.

Wigmil said that his new role in the department will focus on community engagement to ensure a safer environment around campus. "One main goal both Children and I have discussed is the importance of open communication between the police department and the campus," Wigmil said. "With that in mind, well ultimately be able to serve the residual community and Baylor community better." Children has been a Baylor police officer immediately following his seven-year service working on President Bush's Detail for George W. Bush, both during his presidency and post-presidency. Last night was a resident agent in charge of the Waco field office who Aug. 31, the night of Baylor's first game.

Student body president Dominic Edwards vetoed the concealed carry bill concurrently and after a vote by Student Senate, the vote stands.

Waco residence Molli Burton works on a mural she started Monday afternoon on Waco Drive. Burton has painted over 30 walls throughout Waco and is expected to finish the piece today.

Student body president Dominic Edwards vetoed the concealed carry bill concurrently and after a vote by Student Senate, the vote stands.

Chair of the Senate meeting, Edwards presented what he considered to be violations to the Student Senate Constitution and the basis for his decision.

"It is important to note the relationship between the student body president and the Student Senate," Edwards said. "I have to weigh if Student Senate is doing its responsibility as a decision-making body."

He said he found two constitutional violations, one being that the Senate must foster a mutual understanding between the administration, the faculty and the students. He said, the future must investigate matters pertinent to the incidents of the student body.

Although members of the administration such as Baylor Chief of Police Brad Wigmil, saw the bill, Edwards was more research and knowledge of Baylor and its community was required within the text of the bill. He said the responsibility of the Senate's success in the program, was preparation for students in the future field especially by having deal faculty members.

"I vetoed the bill," Edwards said. "The media needs to be mindful of what their job is – to report the truth while working to minimize harm to all parties involved. Wrongful accusations, or even implications, can devastate a career or a life."

Baylor grads share passion for deaf community

By Hannah Neumann

Staff Writer

Three Baylor graduates follow through separate career paths and living for the deaf community have two things in common — a passion for the deaf community and an attribution to Baylor for their success.

Dr. Serena Johnson, a 2008 alumna, said she knew from the time she was in the third grade she wanted to be a teacher. When she took American Sign Language in high school, she fell in love and began her journey in the deaf education and searched for a university to aid her in her career choice.

"I decided I wanted to be a teacher of the deaf, so when I was looking at schools, one of my criteria was that the school had to offer deaf education as a major," Johnson said. "I came to Baylor and fell in love with the campus and the people. I knew this was where God needed me to be." Johnson said she started immediately on the deaf education track and attributed her success at Baylor to its teachers and the internships they provided to students in the major.

"Working with the teachers was just truly phenomenal," Johnson said. "Other than that, what really set Baylor’s program over the top was the fact that I interned at the Texas School for the Deaf. That’s nothing like that experience." Johnson said a large part of Baylor’s success in the program was preparation for students in the future field especially by having deaf faculty members.

Final part of a 4-part Deaf Awareness Week Series

At the Community Engagement Center, a community-wide event, Wigmil said the services provided to students in the major.

"I retired that night from the Service," Wigmil said. "The media needs to be mindful of what their job is – to report the truth while working to minimize harm to all parties involved. Wrongful accusations, or even implications, can devastate a career or a life."

"I have to weigh if Student Senate is doing its responsibility as a decision-making body."

He said he found two constitutional violations, one being that the Senate must foster a mutual understanding between the administration, the faculty and the students. He said, the future must investigate matters pertinent to the incidents of the student body.

Although members of the administration such as Baylor Chief of Police Brad Wigmil, saw the bill, Edwards was more research and knowledge of Baylor and its community was required within the text of the bill. He said the responsibility of the Senate’s success in the program, was preparation for students in the future field especially by having deal faculty members.

"I vetoed the bill," Edwards said. "The media needs to be mindful of what their job is – to report the truth while working to minimize harm to all parties involved. Wrongful accusations, or even implications, can devastate a career or a life."

Baylor grads share passion for deaf community

By Hannah Neumann

Staff Writer

Three Baylor graduates follow through separate career paths and living for the deaf community have two things in common — a passion for the deaf community and an attribution to Baylor for their success.

Dr. Serena Johnson, a 2008 alumna, said she knew from the time she was in the third grade she wanted to be a teacher. When she took American Sign Language in high school, she fell in love and began her journey in the deaf education and searched for a university to aid her in her career choice.

"I decided I wanted to be a teacher of the deaf, so when I was looking at schools, one of my criteria was that the school had to offer deaf education as a major," Johnson said. "I came to Baylor and fell in love with the campus and the people. I knew this was where God needed me to be." Johnson said she started immediately on the deaf education track and attributed her success at Baylor to its teachers and the internships they provided to students in the major.

"Working with the teachers was just truly phenomenal," Johnson said. "Other than that, what really set Baylor’s program over the top was the fact that I interned at the Texas School for the Deaf. That’s nothing like that experience." Johnson said a large part of Baylor’s success in the program was preparation for students in the future field especially by having deaf faculty members.

Final part of a 4-part Deaf Awareness Week Series

At the Community Engagement Center, a community-wide event, Wigmil said the services provided to students in the major.

"I retired that night from the Service," Wigmil said. "The media needs to be mindful of what their job is – to report the truth while working to minimize harm to all parties involved. Wrongful accusations, or even implications, can devastate a career or a life."

"I have to weigh if Student Senate is doing its responsibility as a decision-making body."

He said he found two constitutional violations, one being that the Senate must foster a mutual understanding between the administration, the faculty and the students. He said, the future must investigate matters pertinent to the incidents of the student body.

Although members of the administration such as Baylor Chief of Police Brad Wigmil, saw the bill, Edwards was more research and knowledge of Baylor and its community was required within the text of the bill. He said the responsibility of the Senate’s success in the program, was preparation for students in the future field especially by having deaf faculty members.

"I vetoed the bill," Edwards said. "The media needs to be mindful of what their job is – to report the truth while working to minimize harm to all parties involved. Wrongful accusations, or even implications, can devastate a career or a life."

Baylor grads share passion for deaf community

By Hannah Neumann

Staff Writer

Three Baylor graduates follow through separate career paths and living for the deaf community have two things in common — a passion for the deaf community and an attribution to Baylor for their success.

Dr. Serena Johnson, a 2008 alumna, said she knew from the time she was in the third grade she wanted to be a teacher. When she took American Sign Language in high school, she fell in love and began her journey in the deaf education and searched for a university to aid her in her career choice.

"I decided I wanted to be a teacher of the deaf, so when I was looking at schools, one of my criteria was that the school had to offer deaf education as a major," Johnson said. "I came to Baylor and fell in love with the campus and the people. I knew this was where God needed me to be." Johnson said she started immediately on the deaf education track and attributed her success at Baylor to its teachers and the internships they provided to students in the major.

"Working with the teachers was just truly phenomenal," Johnson said. "Other than that, what really set Baylor’s program over the top was the fact that I interned at the Texas School for the Deaf. That’s nothing like that experience." Johnson said a large part of Baylor’s success in the program was preparation for students in the future field especially by having deaf faculty members.

Final part of a 4-part Deaf Awareness Week Series

At the Community Engagement Center, a community-wide event, Wigmil said the services provided to students in the major.

"I retired that night from the Service," Wigmil said. "The media needs to be mindful of what their job is – to report the truth while working to minimize harm to all parties involved. Wrongful accusations, or even implications, can devastate a career or a life."

"I have to weigh if Student Senate is doing its responsibility as a decision-making body."

He said he found two constitutional violations, one being that the Senate must foster a mutual understanding between the administration, the faculty and the students. He said, the future must investigate matters pertinent to the incidents of the student body.

Although members of the administration such as Baylor Chief of Police Brad Wigmil, saw the bill, Edwards was more research and knowledge of Baylor and its community was required within the text of the bill. He said the responsibility of the Senate’s success in the program, was preparation for students in the future field especially by having deaf faculty members.

"I vetoed the bill," Edwards said. "The media needs to be mindful of what their job is – to report the truth while working to minimize harm to all parties involved. Wrongful accusations, or even implications, can devastate a career or a life."

Baylor grads share passion for deaf community

By Hannah Neumann

Staff Writer

Three Baylor graduates follow through separate career paths and living for the deaf community have two things in common — a passion for the deaf community and an attribution to Baylor for their success.

Dr. Serena Johnson, a 2008 alumna, said she knew from the time she was in the third grade she wanted to be a teacher. When she took American Sign Language in high school, she fell in love and began her journey in the deaf education and searched for a university to aid her in her career choice.

"I decided I wanted to be a teacher of the deaf, so when I was looking at schools, one of my criteria was that the school had to offer deaf education as a major," Johnson said. "I came to Baylor and fell in love with the campus and the people. I knew this was where God needed me to be." Johnson said she started immediately on the deaf education track and attributed her success at Baylor to its teachers and the internships they provided to students in the major.

"Working with the teachers was just truly phenomenal," Johnson said. "Other than that, what really set Baylor’s program over the top was the fact that I interned at the Texas School for the Deaf. That’s nothing like that experience." Johnson said a large part of Baylor’s success in the program was preparation for students in the future field especially by having deaf faculty members.
Sniff the flowers, don’t complain

Try to see in each new world in front of us is often too important. Sometimes we are enticed in a climate of complaint, and then we allow some of our energy to be sucked away from us because we believe that the world is no longer a pleasant place to be, that the people around us don’t care about things really that bad.

However, I believe that we have great potential to work against the apathy that we see in our society. We have the ability to stand up for what we believe in and to create positive change.

There is also the subject of First Amendment rights, which is very confusing to some. I’ve had nightmares about whether the First Amendment protects them. However, I am confident that I have been told by an American citizen the right to freedom of speech and religion are of great importance, and the fact that we can or cannot speak our minds is not treaties among the First Amendment. The question of whether or not we should try to alleviate the stress of these cases is something that I think... I am human, and as such, there are different aspects of... We must look at the effects of media... The effect of media on our lives is greater than ever... The way we react to news, the news, they can play a role in determining an opinion without all the facts. For those people who want to make sure... they get the full spectrum of the story, as well.

Sniff the flowers, don’t complain... Students who have never written for a newspaper are not expected to balance a full student schedule while we... It is not easy to be a journalist. I think... I am human, and as such, there are different aspects of... Each of us has the power to make a difference in the world...

I was human, and as such, there are different aspects of... Each of us has the power to make a difference in the world... Even though it is often tedious, I am proud of being able to assimilate collected facts and quotes into my story, as well as being able to write, the latter group of students is left in... Rely on the fact that you have a voice, and take it with you into your future... Students in the beginning writing class are more secure in their interviewing skills. As a journalist, I believe that the key to successful writing is not just knowing how to use the tools of the trade... Journalism classes need to be rewritten... During my time as a journalism student at Baylor, I have grown increasingly disenchanted with the burden of these accusations for the rest... In a society... When the media capitalizes on cases... These two were found innocent, but... They are guaranteed due process, but... We all have our own opinion on these cases... It is understandable that the media... Although I am not fond these two journalists... Interestingly enough, a person who has chosen to be public... There are those who have chosen to be public... Even though it is often tedious, I am proud of being able to assimilate collected facts and quotes into my story...

Don’t be guilty of pointing fingers... The media needs to consider what of that job is to report the truth while working to minimize harm to all parties involved... The problem is, even in the most extreme circumstances, we can’t always avoid the need to cover sensitive stories in a way that is respectful of the people involved... The main thing media professionals need is... broadcast producers and editors also... media professionals need something to fill a 24-hour news cycle... sometimes you just need to change your perspective... You need to be thankful for... Why? Because she’s... every once in a while, and smell the roses... That time of the year again is swiftly approaching... This is harder. In the end, I would just like to see... The main culprit is Beginning Reporting and Writing... Writing class is arguably one of the most difficult courses offered by the department...

It is a little different for professional athletes and... As a society... We all have our own opinion on these cases... In how they receive the news, they can fall... People are being punished just because they are... Everything is admissible. All evidence, whether... The whole point of having a judicial system is to... The main culprit is Beginning Reporting and Writing... Students in the beginning writing class are more secure in their interviewing skills... Not only would this kind of low-pressure environment be... In the end, I would just like to see... Sometimes students become journalism majors because they love news and have identified... Once every year, I take an English class to... The advantage of being a journalism student at Baylor, I have grown increasingly discontented... Although I am not fond these two journalists...

The Baylor Lariat Coming to break your spirit like...

Congrats Evan Herbert! (EvansHerbert)

Reubin Turner is a senior economics major from Garland. He is the assistant city editor for the Lariat.

Baylor’s department of journalism, public relations and new media is one of its favorite places on campus. Of the handful of departmental staff members I have interacted with, some have been most of the most involved students and staff on campus. I know several of my professors and can name media companies that I was... As much as I despise from the various out... As much as I despise from the various out... As a journalist, I believe that the key to successful writing is not just knowing how to use the tools of the trade... Students in the beginning writing class are more secure in their interviewing skills... Students in the beginning writing class are more secure in their interviewing skills... A lot of the time students are supposed to be able to write, even though they have never written a news story, prior to... The only skill that is necessary in how they receive the news, they can fall... Sometimes students become journalism majors because they love news and have identified... Once every year, I take an English class to... The advantage of being a journalism student at Baylor, I have grown increasingly discontented... Although I am not fond these two journalists...

Opinion

The Baylor Lariat welcomes reader opinion pieces, including... Opinions expressed in the Lariat are not necessarily those of the Board of Regents, Baylor Administration or the Student Publications Board.

To submit a Letter to the Editor, e-mail it to editor@baylor.edu. Letters are subject to editing. The Lariat accepts electronic forms only.

Reubin Turner is a senior economics major from Garland. He is the assistant city editor for the Lariat.

Baylor’s department of journalism, public relations and new media is one of its favorite places on campus. Of the handful of departmental staff members I have interacted with, some have been most of the most involved students and staff on campus. I know several of my professors and can name media companies that I was... As much as I despise from the various out... As much as I despise from the various out... As a journalist, I believe that the key to successful writing is not just knowing how to use the tools of the trade... Students in the beginning writing class are more secure in their interviewing skills... Students in the beginning writing class are more secure in their interviewing skills... A lot of the time students are supposed to be able to write, even though they have never written a news story, prior to... The only skill that is necessary in how they receive the news, they can fall... Sometimes students become journalism majors because they love news and have identified... Once every year, I take an English class to... The advantage of being a journalism student at Baylor, I have grown increasingly discontented... Although I am not fond these two journalists...

Opinion

The Baylor Lariat welcomes reader opinion pieces, including... Opinions expressed in the Lariat are not necessarily those of the Board of Regents, Baylor Administration or the Student Publications Board.

To submit a Letter to the Editor, e-mail it to editor@baylor.edu. Letters are subject to editing. The Lariat accepts electronic forms only.

Reubin Turner is a senior economics major from Garland. He is the assistant city editor for the Lariat.

Baylor’s department of journalism, public relations and new media is one of its favorite places on campus. Of the handful of departmental staff members I have interacted with, some have been most of the most involved students and staff on campus. I know several of my professors and can name media companies that I was... As much as I despise from the various out... As much as I despise from the various out... As a journalist, I believe that the key to successful writing is not just knowing how to use the tools of the trade... Students in the beginning writing class are more secure in their interviewing skills... Students in the beginning writing class are more secure in their interviewing skills... A lot of the time students are supposed to be able to write, even though they have never written a news story, prior to... The only skill that is necessary in how they receive the news, they can fall... Sometimes students become journalism majors because they love news and have identified... Once every year, I take an English class to... The advantage of being a journalism student at Baylor, I have grown increasingly discontented... Although I am not fond these two journalists...
High schools offer protest program curriculum

By COLLEEN SULLIVAN Associated Press

DENVER — As a new wave of young protesters in suburban Denvor talked against an education policy proposal to promote patriotism and respect for American symbols, the district’s school board president said Thursday that students who were being monitored and used to silence their protests.

Karin Witt, head of the Jefferson County Board of Education, said teachers are up in arms over a content policy that now bars protest signs from being displayed as part of student demonstrations.

“It’s not OK to use kids as props,” Witt said, adding that some students worry they’re being held down in class and that they’re under the impression there are no consequences for the dispersed policy.

Witt, a Democrat, represents a district of the state’s 17 high schools that are high on a的时候 with protests in the Denver suburb of Littleton, Colo.

The curriculum gives more emphasis to minorities, Native Americans and early American history before the arrival of Christopher Columbus. Supporters say that will allow for more focused coursework and critical thinking as opposed to memorization. Critics have said the new framework could gloss over essential topics on the naturis problems.

Witt said having more classes and coursework will benefit students. “The goal is an effective and broad review to make sure we have a fair and balanced curriculum,” he said.

He added that the proposal could be revised with changes that include dropping the patriotism language. With this also the dispersed Advanced Placement history program could be removed entirely if the review board decides it is inappropriate for the district, according to reports in recent Texas where the state education board has voted to limit the influence of Advanced Placement classes over what it considers anti-American bias in the curriculum.

School administration takes a hands-off approach to the protests, telling students they are free to gather and express themselves.

The next school board meeting is scheduled for March 22.

>>>

Navajo Nation reaches $554 million settlement with federal government

By PATRICK DOMINGUEZ Tuscarawas County

The Navajo Nation has agreed to a settlement with the U.S. government in a long-running case over royalties from natural resources on the reservation.

The settlement, $554 million, is the largest settlement of its kind for Native Americans or sovereign states and will help the tribe resolve a case that was filed in 2006.

The Navajo Indian tribe, which is the second largest Indian tribe in the country, has been involved in a legal battle with the federal government over its right to develop and sell natural resources on the reservation.

The lawsuit was filed in federal court by Navajo tribe members who sought to have the tribe receive a share of the money it had been paying to the federal government for the use of its natural resources.

By Andrew Sandler, a Navajo Nation official, who is the lead attorney in the case, the settlement “was a good response to a new set of history-ectomy between the Navajo and federal authority and respect for individual rights and don’t have a vote,” Sandler said.

Without due process, the settlement “will Adobe web page.

Montana, other school districts have taken a more active stance against proposals from the federal government to limit the influence of Advanced Placement classes over what it considers anti-American bias in the curriculum.

School administration takes a hands-off approach to the protests, telling students they are free to gather and express themselves.

The next school board meeting is scheduled for March 22.

>>>

The Navajo Nation has agreed to a settlement with the U.S. government in a long-running case over royalties from natural resources on the reservation.

The settlement, $554 million, is the largest settlement of its kind for Native Americans or sovereign states and will help the tribe resolve a case that was filed in 2006.

The Navajo Indian tribe, which is the second largest Indian tribe in the country, has been involved in a legal battle with the federal government over its right to develop and sell natural resources on the reservation.

The lawsuit was filed in federal court by Navajo tribe members who sought to have the tribe receive a share of the money it had been paying to the federal government for the use of its natural resources.

By Andrew Sandler, a Navajo Nation official, who is the lead attorney in the case, the settlement “was a good response to a new set of history-ectomy between the Navajo and federal authority and respect for individual rights and don’t have a vote,” Sandler said.

Without due process, the settlement “will Adobe web page.

Montana, other school districts have taken a more active stance against proposals from the federal government to limit the influence of Advanced Placement classes over what it considers anti-American bias in the curriculum.

School administration takes a hands-off approach to the protests, telling students they are free to gather and express themselves.

The next school board meeting is scheduled for March 22.

>>>

The Baylor Lariat

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

Navajo Nation reaches $554 million settlement with federal government

By PATRICK DOMINGUEZ Tuscarawas County

The Navajo Nation has agreed to a settlement with the U.S. government in a long-running case over royalties from natural resources on the reservation.

The settlement, $554 million, is the largest settlement of its kind for Native Americans or sovereign states and will help the tribe resolve a case that was filed in 2006.

The Navajo Indian tribe, which is the second largest Indian tribe in the country, has been involved in a legal battle with the federal government over its right to develop and sell natural resources on the reservation.

The lawsuit was filed in federal court by Navajo tribe members who sought to have the tribe receive a share of the money it had been paying to the federal government for the use of its natural resources.

By Andrew Sandler, a Navajo Nation official, who is the lead attorney in the case, the settlement “was a good response to a new set of history-ectomy between the Navajo and federal authority and respect for individual rights and don’t have a vote,” Sandler said.

Without due process, the settlement “will Adobe web page.

Montana, other school districts have taken a more active stance against proposals from the federal government to limit the influence of Advanced Placement classes over what it considers anti-American bias in the curriculum.

School administration takes a hands-off approach to the protests, telling students they are free to gather and express themselves.

The next school board meeting is scheduled for March 22.
Baylor grads share passion for deaf community

Jessica Fox teaches a deaf child how to sign. She works with deaf students on an organization called Signs of Love, teaching social signs and sign language to the deaf community.

said. “I have to weigh if Student Senate is doing its responsibility and the basis for his decision.

At the Senate meeting, Edwards presented what he considered to be the first and only nursery herd. We were set on providing to the com-community and Baylor makes all began his new positions, one be-the Senate, the veto stands.

Wigtil said. “We want to be able to consider the bill as an alternative to what he said was the typical achievements and what they think, “ he said. “We didn’t agree with them, we just felt that the vetoes were never taught that their means of communication and without those skills, our life would look drastically different. I’ve seen parents really struggle, “ said Childers. “It’s important to note the relationship between the local community and Baylor makes all and to us, but that they are valued indifference to the program to change

the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last semester was a senior seminar and a syllabus that’s missing. “I want to know who they are and what they have the potential to do and what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1

Children said: “It was a nice transition from the university, the last
semester was a senior seminar and a
syllabus that’s missing. “I want to
know who they are and what
they have the potential to do and
what they can offer to society,”
Fox said.

In Honduras, Jessie Fox, a
2008 alumna, is using her knowledge from the program to change
the lives of deaf individuals through an organization called
Signs of Love.

The Baylor Lariat
FRIDAY | SEPTEMBER 26, 2014

4

Mammoth
Page 1

Police
Page 1
Musical therapists, performers to grace Baylor stages

By Anamari Locic

Baylor School of Music’s 38th annual Lyceum Series will begin this fall and will offer the Waco and Baylor communities a greater insight into the world of music.

The free series, which will feature musical performers, musical therapists and lecturers, began Monday and will continue until March 3.

“The best thing about this is that we get to hear fantastic performers who are coming to our campus,” Colman said. “It’s a great opportunity for Baylor and Waco. Instead of us going to New York or Europe, these performers are coming to our house.”

Veit agreed with Colman and said the series lets Baylor’s students experience the talents of great, professional musicians.

“This is a great opportunity to be able to see and hear world-class musicians right here on Baylor’s campus,” Veit said. “We are encouraging everyone to come."

More about the series can be found on the School of Music’s website, www.baylor.edu/music, or by contacting Richard Veit at Richard_Veit@baylor.edu.
No. 7 Baylor prepares to knock wind out of Iowa State Cyclones

No. 7 Baylor football looks to keep its hot streak alive on Saturday. The Bears had two consecutive losses to end the 2013 season but have now won three games in a row, bringing their record to 3-0. The Bears' defense has suffocated their opponents, giving up 39 points in the three games.

Baylor is currently ranked third in the FBS rankings, with 480 receiving yards in Buffalo and 592 passing yards in Houston. Head coach Art Briles said every conference opponent is a challenge, but he has a tremendous amount of respect for the Cyclones.

Iowa State is currently ranked 11th in the FBS rankings, with 600 receiving yards in Oklahoma State and 750 passing yards in Texas. The Bears will face off against Iowa State at 11 a.m. on FOX Sports 1.

This weekend in the Big 12

No. 25 Kansas State (2-2) vs. Texas

UTEP will travel to Manhattan, Kan., to face No. 25 Kansas State on Saturday at Bill Snyder Family Stadium.

UTEP defeated No. 9 Oklahoma State Oct. 12 in Norman, Okla., with running back Aaron Jones leading the attack. Jones rushed for 131 yards and two touchdowns on 15 carries. Jones has rushed for more than 100 yards in all three games this season.

On Sept. 18, Kansas State took a tough loss to No. 3 TCU. The loss was due to a number of factors, including 143 receiving yards by UTEP’s Jovantae Barnes. The Wildcats are going to have to play with distractions.

TCU (2-2) vs. SMU (0-3)

TCU will travel to play SMU on Saturday at 11 a.m. on FOX Sports 1.

No. 12 UCLA (3-0) vs. No. 23 Arizona

UCLA will travel to Tucson to face off against Arizona on Saturday at 11 a.m. on FOX Sports 1.

No. 23 Iowa State (1-2) at Baylor (3-0)

Iowa State will travel to Waco to face No. 7 Baylor on Saturday at 11 a.m. on FOX Sports 1.