

The Baylor Laria THURSDAY | APRIL 11, 2013 THURSDAY | APRIL 11, 2013 THURSDAY | APRIL 11, 2013

SPORTS Page 5

Hoping for goodThe Lady Bears look to bounce back from a rocky stretch and end the season strong

NEWS Page 6

passed by the Senate

A&E Page 4

Tournament of Champs

Baylor senior competes against 15 other students for $100,000 on 'Jeopardy'

In Print

>> PLAY BALL The baseball team has gained momentum after a slow start to the season

Page 5

>> WHY DO IT?

Is becoming a journalist worth the work? One reporter explores the usefulness of a media degree in a market with a rapid decline in the number of jobs

Page 3

DOWNLOAD THE LARIAT APP ON YOUR APPLE AND Android Devices today!

Viewpoints

"Here's the problem: Pokémon and Super Mario aren't real. If PETA wants to be taken seriously, then it needs to stop criticizing Nintendo games and focus on actually promoting the ethical treatment of animals. Nintendo is not under fire from animal rights groups. PETA is."

Page 2

Bear Briefs

The place to go to know the places to go

Fun at the ballpark The Baylor Alumni Network will sponsor a community tailgate from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Baylor Ballpark. A free hotdog lunch followed by Bluebell ice cream will be offered along with carnival games, inflatables and free admission to the baseball and softball games.

To the house

Texas welfare applicants may be subjected to drug testing under a bill

Chamber waits to reveal headliner

Students express frustration with lack of knowledge about performer

By Danny Huizinga Contributor AND CAROLINE BREWTON EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Banners promoting the event are up around campus, but no announcement has yet been made as to who will headline Baylor's Diadeloso celebration.

With Diadeloso coming up in less than a week and no headliner announced, students are left wondering what their entertainment will be.

"I feel like Chamber's ambiguity concerning the headliner for Diadeloso is taking a huge gamble on attendance. People might not go if they don't know that they'll like who is playing," said Travis Gidley, a Sugar Land junior.

Diadeloso, an annual holiday for students, will be held next Thursday. During Dia, students are entertained by a variety of shows, activities and sporting events, usually culminating in a performance by a headliner band.

Expectations are high. Chamber has been given an increased amount of funding by student government to find quality entertainment. According to student government Internal Vice President Brian Kim, Chamber was given $90,000 for entertainment for this year's event. The figure is meant to cover total entertainment costs and not just the headliner. This is almost four times the amount budgeted for Diadeloso 2012, when Chamber was allocated only $25,000 for entertainment expenses.

Furthermore, Kim said, the process was made easier for Chamber to secure the funds this year. Prior to this year, Chamber had to fill out a formal application for funds, just like any other student organization. At the beginning of this year, however, student government voted to grant the increased funds to Chamber in a special allocation for Diadeloso without requiring the application process. This took place on Sept. 6 of last year.

"By giving them the money at the beginning of the year, this allowed for Chamber to have more time to book an artist," said one senator, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The intent was for Chamber to use the increased resources to secure a more popular artist than the one who performed last year, the senator said.

Last year, the headliner band, Parachute, was announced by March 27, a full 24 days before Diadeloso. In previous years, the event's details were also released sooner. In 2011, country artist Jack Ingram was chosen and announced by March 24. Wellknown artist Colbie Callait played at Dia in 2010. Details of her concert were released as early as April 8 for the April 22 event. Pauline Minnaar, the Diadeloso chair for the Baylor Chamber of Commerce, the organization in charge of the event, said the

SEE HEADLINER, page 6

Hospital back to normal after lockdown

And Rob Bradfield LARIAT STAFF

Waco's Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center continues normal business today after a lockdown Wednesday morning that lasted a few hours.

Shortly after 10 a.m. on Wednesday, Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center in Waco went on lockdown in response to a threatening phone call.

The hospital, which is located at 100 Hillcrest Medical Blvd., was given the all-clear late Wednesday

Hospital CEO Glenn Robinson said the lockdown was declared as a precautionary measure after the hospital received a the lockdown, the hospital's operations continued, although security guards were posted at hospital entrances to screen potential

"Safety is the first thing that comes to our mind," Robinson

Members of the Waco Police Department responded in addition to hospital security. Sgt. Patrick Swanton of the Waco Police Department said the investigation into the threat is ongoing, but "there is no immediate hostile action going on inside the hospital."

Since the all-clear was given for the hospital and the lockdown ended, the screening has stopped.

Robinson said this is the first time this facility has been threatened in the past year.

Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center has been given the all-clear and is back to normal business after a threatening phone call that put it on lockdown Wednesday morning.

MONICA LAKE | LARIAT PHOTOGR

Take it away, hoppers

Ryan Alyward and Ben Barnes of Kappa Sigma finish the last leg of the three-legged race at Kappa Alpha Theta's "Theta Olympics," on Wednesday, where each fraternity competes in different events, from an inflatable challenge course to a muddy tug-o-war.

Air Force general: Actions aim to deter NKorea

By Audrey McAvoy ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOINT BASE PEARL HAR-BOR-HICKAM, Hawaii — The United States sent its most powerful airplanes to the Korean peninsula in recent weeks in part because it wants North Korea to know what the American military is capable of doing, the top U.S. Air Force commander in the Pacific said.

B-2 stealth bombers, F-22 stealth fighters and B-52 bombers have recently all flown to South Korea for exercises or short deployments in what amounted to a dramatic display of U.S. air power. The stealth planes are capable of sneaking past radar undetected. $\ensuremath{\text{B-2}}$ and $\ensuremath{\text{B-52}}$ bombers are capable of delivering nuclear weapons.

"Every morning that a potential adversary gets up and goes, 'You know what, I'm not going to mess with America today' that's a good morning," Gen. Herbert Carlisle said Tuesday in an interview at his headquarters in Hawaii. "We need all those mornings to keep coming."

The U.S. is hoping a missile defense system it's sending to Guam, a U.S. territory and strategically important military outpost 1,500 miles south of Tokyo, will have the same deterrent effect, he said.

If "they know we got something that can knock down their missiles — it may stop them from shooting them," Carlisle said.

The U.S. has also explained it's reassuring its allies by showing it's prepared to defend them.

The missile defense system - called Terminal High Altitude Area Defense — is designed to intercept missiles during their final stage of flight. It joins other technology the military has to intercept missiles during their initial and midflight phases.

South Korean Army soldiers, along with U.S. Air Force's Airman First Class Lee Simpson, top, run a joint military drill between South Korea and the United States to protect a U.S. air base on Thursday near the Osan U.S. Air Base in Pyeongtaek, south of Seoul, South Korea.

Carlisle said the U.S. also is considering sending high-altitude surveillance planes from Guam to Japan during the tropical island's summer storm season. Often, typhoons and thunderstorms around Guam ground the Global

Hawk drones from April through November. The planes would be less likely to face weather problems if they were flying out of a place like Misawa Air Base in northern Japan, Carlisle said.

The U.S. uses the drones to monitor North Korea and could do so from Japan as well, Carlisle said.

"They could do all the missions that they do now if they were flying out of Japanese bases,"

Tokyo is also considering buying some of the drones for its own use, Carlisle said.

"We're still working it with the Japanese government. I don't know whether we'll do it this year or not. It does cost money to do that, again that's another factor. We're still examining it and looking at how to make it happen. When we do it is another question," he said.

SEE NKOREA, page 6

LARIAT LETTERS

Lariat picture misleading

I'm writing in response to an April 3 article titled "Central Texas plagued by rabies." As a citizen of Waco and a person that works with the feral cat community in our area, I would like to offer a few words in response to the article about recent rabies cases in McLennan County.

People should always approach every animal they do not know with caution. Even if the animal is leashed and with their owner, it may not respond well to strangers.

In your article, you featured an image of an ear-tipped cat. If a feral cat has a left ear tip or notch, like the one featured in the image accompanying your article, it is part of the Trap-Neuter Return (TNR) program. These cats receive a rabies vaccination before being returned home after surgery and the caretakers monitor the health of the colony members. This makes these animals safer for all in our community.

It should be noted, the cat that was found to have rabies in the downtown Waco area was not part of the TNR program and was not ear tipped or vaccinated by a feral cat colony caretaker.

With the recent outbreak of rabies occurrences in our community, it is imperative that animal owners make sure their companions are vaccinated. Rabies vaccinations are available as low as $10 at the Animal Birth Control Clinic located at 3238 Clay Ave, Waco, Texas 76711.

- Sarah Key, volunteer at Heart of Texas Feral Friends and Animal Birth Control Clinic.

Require stress course

A common problem I'm seeing on campus is overworked, overstressed, sleep-deprived students who are too busy with schoolwork to fully enjoy their college experience. I have had multiple friends say "I live for the weekends," but this isn't how it should be.

Every student should enjoy day-to-day life here at Baylor because once they have graduated, they'll miss the college days more than ever.

I believe if most students knew how to manage stress in a healthy manner, their college experience would be much better. I feel as though requiring the Stress Management/Mental Health class, given in the health education department, to be taken by all students is the first step in equipping them with tools to manage the stress of school, roommates, finances ... the list goes on.

I believe this class would help so many students with their individual stresses and would give them a variety of ways to deal with stress. Every student is different and with a variety of options for dealing with stress, each student can pick which stress management tools best works for them.

When students can manage their stress in a healthy way, their grades will improve, the will use what time they do have efficiently and their free time will be more enjoyable. It can improve their lives.

-Kristle Obi, Katy sophomore. Obi is a Biology/Pre-Med major.

YOUR ANDROID DEVICE TODAY!

ASHER FREEMAN (MURPHY)

Hypocrisy of PETA gets our goat

Editorial

Hypocrisy is something that rubs people the wrong way.

Currently standing atop the hypocritical power rankings is the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, more commonly known as PETA.

According to the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer services, in 2012, PETA euthanized nearly 90 percent of the adoptable animals that it took in. Over the last 11 years, that total climbs to over 29,000 euthanized animals.

PETA is not a no-kill organization. According to PETA's website, "When 'no-kill' animal shelters and rescue groups are filled to capacity, which is almost always, they are left with two options: turn away more animals than they take in or warehouse animals, often in substandard, filthy, and severely crowded conditions, for weeks,

"Because of PETA [...]

there is now a higher standard of care for animals.
Unfortunately, PETA is now way off-base. It has gone from an animal rights activism organization to a euthanasia clinic that routinely puts on pathetic months, or even years on end. Most, if not all, of the animals who are turned away from such facilities still face untimely deaths — publicity stunts."

just not at these facilities."

Stand where you will on the kill or no kill issue, but PETA simply cannot be a respected organization when it euthanizes nearly 15,000 of its animals since 2006 when only 131 get adopted in that span of time.

According to "Shocking Photos: PETA's Secret Slaughter of Kittens, Puppies," an article published in April by the Huffington Post, some animals that were euthanized were found in garbage bags inside of a supermarket Dumpster.

According to the Huffington Post, "PETA described these animals as 'adorable' and 'perfect.'

A veterinarian who naively gave PETA some of the animals, thinking they would find them homes, and examined the dead bodies of others, testified that they were 'healthy' and 'adoptable."

It's awfully ironic that one of the last places a stray dog wants to be is inside PETA's headquarters, even if it is relatively healthy.

This isn't the first time that

PETA's actions have left people shaking their heads.

In October of last year, the or-

In October of last year, the organization released a game called "Pokémon Black and Blue."

According to PETA, "The amount of time that Pokémon spend stuffed in pokéballs is akin to how elephants are chained up in train carts, waiting to be let out to 'perform' in circuses."

In November of 2011, PETA created a game that criticized Super Mario's use of the Tanooki suit. The idea was to teach people that Mario was the bad guy because he wears fur.

Here's the problem: Pokémon and Super Mario aren't real. If PETA wants to be taken seriously, then it needs to stop criticizing Nintendo games and focus on actually promoting the ethical treatment of animals. Nintendo is not under fire from animal rights groups. PETA is.

PETA has done some good work in the past. The organization shed some much-needed light on animal rights issues.

eral public may not have known about companies and researchers that commit acts of animal cruelty. Because of PETA's pressure and

If it weren't for PETA, the gen-presence, there is now a higher standard of care for animals.

Unfortunately, PETA is now way off-base.

It has gone from an animal rights activism organization to a euthanasia clinic that routinely puts on pathetic publicity stunts. PETA needs to get back to its original noble cause.

Just keep smiling, even when emotional vampires attack

This morning while I was getting Starbucks, the cashier annoyed me to no end.

Why, you may ask?

She was just too excited. She had the biggest grin on her face, like giving me my Passion Tea drink was just the best part of her day. I do believe it could have been me not having enough caffeine in my body at the time to deal with someone's exuberance, but it was also the fact that since I wasn't in a good mood, anyone else being in that good of a mood was just annoying.

Usually my friends tell me I am that person. I'm the kind of person that is just happy, often for no reason. I'm usually found smiling, I skip when I walk sometimes and I just genuinely look on the bright side 99 percent of the time. This tends to annoy people, and now I can understand why.

I think as human beings, we

Mashaal Hashmi| Copy editor

tend to inflict our emotions onto other people, and we don't mean to do it necessarily. It just kind of happens. I was just in a nasty mood earlier and that's why I lashed out and got annoyed at the girl at Starbucks. My friends tell me to hush sometimes when I'm being super exuberant about something.

I think the classic argument of pessimism vs optimism comes into play here. I'm a pretty optimistic person, and sometimes people just don't want to hear about how, "It'll all be better soon." Other times, people do need that.

I think the important thing to remember is the difference between sympathy vs. empathy and how to be able to navigate that in a conversation.

Sympathy is showing concern and trying to comfort them whereas empathy is saying you understand and you've been in that situation or know what that must feel like. I think we all need to learn how to be able to read the situation and be sympathetic or empathetic when need be.

The point of my column today is basically don't judge someone else by their outward appearance of happiness. If someone wants to be happy, don't question it, live and let live, man. In fact, let those people spread happiness in the world — it's way better than spreading hate. We live in a world full of negativity and anguish, with poverty and hunger and increasingly bad taste in fashion and music. Each person brings a valuable outlook on life. Don't shun their happiness just because you can't give a name to why they may be happy.

Visit us at www.BaylorLariat.com

"I feel like that girl in 'Mean Girls' that doesn't even go to this school and just has a lot of feelings."

If you think about it, we have a lot to be happy about, even if it takes reminders sometimes. Especially here at Baylor — we go to a prestigious university, we've got a

Delivery

Taylor Younger

*Denotes member of editorial board

lot going for us, even if there are a lot of issues in our life. The best thing to do sometimes is just smile. Start smiling more and express positive ideas and statements and be OK with people who have different opinions. I honestly think if we were just genuinely tried to be more happy in our day to day lives and "stopped to smell the roses," we'd have a better future.

I feel like that girl in "Mean Girls" that doesn't even go to this school and just has a lot of feelings, but at the same time maybe feelings is what'll get us through this mad world.

Basically, you don't need a reason to be happy and if you come upon someone who is happy for what seems like no reason, try not to brush your negativity onto them

Mashaal Hashmi is a junior from Fort Worth. She is a copy editor for the Lariat.

Baylor Lariat | STAFF LIST

Editor-in-chief Caroline Brewton*

City editor

Linda Wilkins*

News editor Alexa Brackin*

Assistant city editor

Rob Bradfield*

Copy desk chief
Josh Wucher

A&E editor Linda Nouven^{*}

Linda Nguyen* Sports editorGreg DeVries*

Photo editor Matt Hellman

Multimedia prod. Haley Peck

Matt Hellman Multimedia prod

Haley Peck

Web editor

David Trower*

Copy editor
Ashley Davis*

Copy editor
Mashaal Hashmi

Staff writer Taylor Rexrode

Staff writer
Paula Ann Solis
Sports writer

Parmida Schahhosseini

Sports writerDaniel Hill

Photographer Travis Taylor

Photographer Monica Lake

Asher Murphy*

Ad Representative
Shelby Pipken

Editorial Cartoonist

Ad Representative Katherine Corliss

Ad Representative Simone Mascarenhas

Ad Representative Victoria Carroll Ad Representative

Aaron Fitzgerald

Delivery
Josue Moreno

Opinion| The Baylor Lariat

welcomes reader viewpoints through letters to the editor and guest columns. Opinions expressed in the Lariat are not necessarily those of the Baylor administration, the Baylor Board of Regents or the Student Publications Board.

To contact the Baylor Lariat:

Newsroom: Lariat@baylor.edu 254-710-1712

Advertising inquiries:
du Lariat_Ads@baylor.edu
2 254-710-3407

Subscriptions

A subscription to the Lariat costs $45 for two semesters. Send check or money order to One Bear Place #97330, Waco, TX, 76798-7330 or e-mail Lariat_ads@baylor.edu. Visa, Discover and MasterCard payments may be phoned to 254-710-2662. Postmaster: Please send address changes to above address.

Poage lecture series hits snag in planning:

Chet Edwards to visit Baylor today

REPORTER

The battle strategy for the 2013 W.R. Poage Lecture "Leadership and Lessons Learned from a Decade of Conflict" might need to

The lecture, scheduled for today, was originally set to feature retired U.S. Army Lt. Gen. and former Fort Hood Commanding Gen. Pete Taylor and retired U.S. Army Lieutenant General and former Fort Hood Commanding General Paul Funk.

Both Taylor and Funk held the same posts at different times.

The discussion was to be moderated by Chet Edwards, the W.R. Poage Distinguished Chair for Public Service and a former member of the U.S. House of Represen-

However, health problems caused Taylor to opt out this Tuesday, two days before the lecture.

Despite the setback, the event will still continue at 4 p.m. today in Bennett Auditorium.

At the time of publication, Edwards was still attempting to find a suitable replacement for Taylor.

"[Edwards] asked a few other generals, but it's a little short notice at this point," said Ben Rogers, director of the Poage Legislative

Rogers said Taylor's decision to opt out and the problems he encountered were sudden. Taylor recently underwent a heart proce-

"He felt OK on Monday, but didn't on Tuesday," Rogers said.

Carl Flynn, director of library communications, said Taylor is not in any serious danger.

"He's doing fine," Flynn said. "He's just having some adverse ef-

Even without Taylor, Rogers remains confident in the event, due partially to the fact that Funk once lectured at University of Texas teaching and education," Rogers said. "He and Chet will still be able to carry on a very spirited conversation about leadership."

Chet Edwards

has a his-

Edwards will be asking questions related to the broad topic of leadership, which Funk will answer from his experiences as a U.S. Army officer and as the commanding general of Fort Hood.

"He's going to ask him what he learned as a leader of Fort Hood, which was in heavy combat at the time," Flynn said. "It's not a historical lecture about that time; it's more of a conversation about the key principles of leadership that grew out of his times of trial."

The discussion is a part of the annual W.R. Poage Lecture series and came about due to Edwards' mission to encourage Baylor students to a pursue leadership and public service.

Journalism career outlook troubling for current students

By Taylor Rexrode STAFF WRITER

The 2013 State of the Media report shows that newsrooms have cut their staff by 30 percent since

With newsrooms at their lowest capacity since 1978, journalists are worried about job prospects and many avid news consumers doubt the quality of information.

Data from the Pew Research Center's Project for Excellence in Journalism shows that online news has skyrocketed and print is holding steady, but fewer people are being hired in news organizations. Less than 40,000 full-time employees work in news today.

According to the report, 31 percent of Americans have stopped following news outlets because of changes in the news delivery and

Traffic, weather and sports have increased in coverage while human interest, crime and political stories have declined over the past seven

Kathleen McKinney, assistant editor of the Wacoan, said that though the changes in the news have cut down on staff, the quality of news has not changed.

"I don't think it has affected the quality," McKinney said. "I just think it has affected the format of it and how it's obtained. People are going online and to television. I think it hurts local newspapers more than anything."

However, the report cites that people are aware of a drop in high-

Of people who abandoned their traditional news organization, 61 percent noticed less thorough stories being reported.

Less people covering less news has led to less in-depth stories and, according to research, fewer enthusiastic news consumers.

With fewer consumers, the job market for newspapers, magazines and broadcast news — considered traditional news outlets — appears bleak. The tumultuous state of the media has put pressure on many Baylor journalism students to be as competitive as possible.

Tyler senior Caitlin Giddens, co-president of the Society of Professional Journalists Baylor chapter, has had three editorial internships since coming to Baylor — Bscene Magazine in 2010, D Magazine in 2012 and London's Eye Magazine last fall — and she has been freelancing for the Wacoan since the start of this semester.

She also worked for the Round Up yearbook as the organization's editor her sophomore year.

"It's been a lot more stressful than I ever realized," Giddens said. "I've applied for internships and scholarships, but the job search is so much more intense and cutthroat. I have to learn how to face rejection and not hearing back from people. I can't take it personally. I have to know I will eventually find a job."

Andover, Kan., junior Allyssa Schoonover said she does not feel fully prepared to look for jobs in what appears to be a shrinking job market for traditional news.

"I'm proud to be a journalist because it's one of the most adaptive fields to be in."

Caitlin Giddens | Tyler senior journalism major

"I wish I had been more aware," Schoonover said. "I like writing and I like the field, but it makes me wish I had known the experience I needed to gain sooner. I wish between freshman and sophomore year I had interned."

Schoonover plans to go into broadcast journalism or TV news and is a part of the Society of Professional Journalists.

While she thinks she has honed writing skills during her time at Baylor, she feels underprepared for the job search process.

"I think as far as writing, Baylor has definitely prepared me for the industry," Schoonover said. "In how to prepare for job interviews and getting internships and getting your resume together, I feel like that isn't as strong in the department. If they added that into the curriculum more, that would help out a lot because with fewer jobs available, we need to stand out

Getting internships has been difficult for her because many organizations only accept interns with previous experience.

McKinney said that the Wacoan expects published work from its interns.

She said to be competitive in the market, students shouldn't wait

"To be a better writer, the only thing you can do is write more,"

McKinney said. Students at Baylor don't have to get a summer internship to start working on their portfolio.

They can get published clips through work-study opportunities with student publications or through journalism classes that publish student content in the Lariat or Focus magazine.

Dr. Marlene Neill, a lecturer in the journalism, public relations and new media department, said the department's shift in focus from pure writing and editing to online and social media-based skills — is meant to help produce well-rounded students ready for the industry.

"The need for journalism skills are still there, but we're focusing more on building skills related to online journalism," Neill said. "The challenge for us as professors is to keep our skills current so that as new technology skills emerge, we're preparing students so that they're qualified for the jobs of the jobs of the future,"

Giddens said the journalism department does prepare students with online and social media-focused classes and the new media degree, which debuted last fall as a new journalism track, but she still feels "very alone" in her job search.

Even with the decline in journalism jobs available, Giddens expressed optimism in her choice if

"I'm so proud to be a journalist because it's one of the most adaptive fields to be in," Giddens said. "I still want to go into journalism because I've been lucky to have internships to show this is where I belong and this is where I thrive. Though I haven't decided where I'm going, I think if you are educated and willing to work, there is a job out there for you."

Al-Qaida alliance in Syria causes trouble, raises fears

By Ryan Lucas ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT — Tensions emerged Wednesday in a newly announced alliance between al-Qaida's franchise in Iraq and the most powerful Syrian rebel faction, which said it was not consulted before the Iraqi group announced their merger and only heard about it through the media.

Al-Qaida in Iraq said Tuesday that it had joined forces with Jabhat al-Nusra or the Nusra Front the most effective force among the mosaic of rebel brigades fighting to topple President Bashar Assad in Syria's civil war. It said they had formed a new alliance called the Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant.

The Syrian government seized upon the purported merger to back its assertion that it is not facing a true popular movement for change but rather a foreign-backed terrorist plot.

The state news agency said Wednesday that the union "proves that this opposition was never anything other than a tool used by the West and by terrorists to destroy the Syrian people.'

Talk of an alliance between Jabhat al-Nusra and al-Qaida in Iraq has raised fears in Baghdad, where intelligence officials said increased cooperation was already evident in a number of deadly attacks.

And in Syria, a stronger Jabhat al-Nusra would only further complicate the battlefield where Western powers have been covertly trying to funnel weapons, training and aid toward more secular rebel groups and army defectors.

A newly-arrived Syrian refugee family waits under a shaded area upon their arrival to the new Jordanian-Emirati refugee camp, Mrajeeb al-Fhood Wednesday in Zarqa, Jordan.

Washington has designated Jabhat al-Nusra a terrorist organization over its links with al-Qaida, and the Syrian group's now public ties with the terrorist network are unlikely to prompt a shift in international support for the broader Syrian opposition.

Earlier this year, the U.S. announced a $60 million non-lethal assistance package for Syria that includes meals and medical supplies for the armed opposition. It was greeted unenthusiastically by some rebel leaders, who said it does far too little.

Washington's next step is expected to be a broader package of non-lethal assistance, expanding from food and medical supplies to body armor and night-vision goggles.

However, President Barack Obama has not given final approval on any new package and an announcement is not imminent, a senior administration official said.

Secretary of State John Kerry, who met with Syrian opposition leaders in London on Wednesday, hinted at the new non-lethal aid package this week, saying the administration had been holding intense talks on how to boost assistance to the rebels.

The U.S. opposes directly arming Syrian opposition fighters, in part out of fear that the weapons could fall into the hands of Islamic extremists such as Jabhat al-Nusra.

The apparent tensions between Jabhat al-Nusra and al-Qaida in Iraq emerged on Wednesday, when Nusra leader Abu Mohammad al-Golani appeared to distance himself from claims the two groups had merged. Instead, he pledged allegiance to al-Qaida's leader, Ayman al-Zawahiri.

(NO MINIMUM AMOUNT REQUIRED. WHILE SUPPLIES LAST.) Sales from the nonprofit Texas Ranger Hall of Fame and Museum gift shop benefit the preservation and education activities of the Museum. For more info, call toll free (877) 750-8631 or visit www.texasranger.org. The gift shop is open 9:00 am to 4:30 pm daily CST. We ship worldwide.

ON SATURDAY, APRIL 13TH SHOP ONLINE AND USE CODE: 413GS10PCTB

BAYLOR STUDENTS ARE GETTING NOTICED... by professional journalists and judges for the Hearst Journalism Awards . Houston Press Club Balfour Publishing . Society for News Design at Michigan State College Media Association • Texas Intercollegiate Press Association ${\it Columbia Scholastic Press Association } \bullet {\it Associated Press Managing Editors of Texas}$ Associated Collegiate Press • Society of Professional Journalists Missouri School of Journalism • Western Publishing Association 38 National Awards in 2012 84 National Awards in the Last Two Years "YEARBOOK OF THE YEAR" by Balfour Publishing 2 YEARS IN A ROW! BEST STUDENT NEWSPAPER IN TEXAS by the Houston Press Club 3 Years in a Row! YOUR CAREER STARTS AT BAYLOR. BAYLOR

Coast Guardsman gets desertion charge

By AUDREY McAVOY ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — A veteran rescue swimmer has been charged with desertion after he went missing for three months and triggered a massive search, the Coast Guard said Wednesday.

Petty Officer 1st Class Russell Matthews faces three other charges including being absent without leave, wrongful use and possession of a controlled substance, and causing the Coast Guard to conduct a search when there was no need, said Chief Warrant Officer Gene Maestas, a Coast Guard spokesman. An Article 32 hearing — the military equivalent of a grand jury hearing — will be held to determine if there's enough evidence for Matthews to be tried in a court-martial.

Matthews was in the process of being discharged from the Coast Guard for illegal use of marijuana when he disappeared in October. The 36-year-old showed up at his home in mid-January.

Police said Matthews was incoherent when he was found, and he taken to a hospital for observation. The Coast Guard later took him into custody and had him confined at a Navy brig while they investigated why he left without authorization.

Baylor takes trivia knowledge from classroom to TV

Plano senior Taylor Roth competed on the game show Jeopardy for its college championship. Roth competed against 15 other students from universities across the country.

By Taylor Rexrode STAFF WRITER

Clue: A Baylor student flew to Los Angeles for a game show. Answer: What is "Jeopardy's" College Championship?

Plano senior Taylor Roth appeared on the game show "Jeopardy" Monday and Tuesday, competing against 15 students from different universities across the country for the grand prize of $100,000 and a spot on "Jeopardy's 'Tournament of Champions show.

The two-week event will air starting May 6. Jeopardy is available in Waco at 2:30 p.m. on KCEN-TV.

Roth, a University Scholars student, said getting on "Jeopardy,"— one of the largest trivia game shows, with 25 million viewers each week- didn't require a lot of studying.

"I didn't study that much because I knew they could talk about just about anything, but I studied up a little on presidents, Shakespeare and world capitals," Roth

Roth was chosen for the show after passing an online test and a personal audition that included a 50-question test and mock version of the game show. She had a personal interview with producers, narrowing her down to one of the 15 students to appear on the program.

Contestant producer Maggie Speak said Roth's charism a played a big role in her acceptance on the show.

"She is a lovely girl," Speak said. "Her personality is just terrific and she plays very well. That's what made her stand out more than anything; she had the whole package."

Roth said her enthusiasm for the show started when she was in middle school. She began watching the show for its speed and variety.

"I really like the fast pace," Roth said. "There's never a dull moment.

"I didn't go in with any expectations because I knew I would have fun.

Being able to cross this off my bucket list is a big thing. It's not about how well I do on the show because it's about the experience."

Taylor Roth | Jeopardy contestant

You don't have a lot of time to think and there is a wide range of categories. If there's not something that appeals to you, then something else will."

"Jeopardy' started back in 1984 as a quiz show to test people on their skills in history, language arts, literature, art, sciences, geography, popular culture and wordplay. The questions are sorted into categories from which contestants can choose the level of difficulty they want.

Speak said the college segment caters to students not only with references to popular culture but also subjects they are studying. She said successful college contestants don't just understand their major but have a "wide range of knowledge." "You want to have a combination going," Speak said. "They need to be well read and they should understand a wide variety of sub-

As a University Scholar, Roth said she studies a combination of materials based on her academic interests. The University Scholars program allows its students to explore their interests as part of their degree plans, forgoing the traditional majors path to graduation. Roth's knowledge base and the support she received from friends and family helped get her behind a "Jeopardy" lectern in California. By the time the show was over, Roth was glad to have accomplished one of her life goals.

"I didn't go in with any expectations because I knew I would have fun. Being able to cross this off my bucket list is a big thing. It's not about how well I do on the show because it's about the experience,"

Book skims surface of revivalist culture with personal account

By Caroline Brewton Editor-in-chief

Chekhov's gun is canon law for the dramatic principle of foreshadowing. It goes a little like this: If a loaded gun is mentioned in the opening of a story, before the story is over, the gun must be used. Otherwise, it should be omitted.

In opening "Holy Ghost Girl," Donna Johnson places a loaded gun in the mind of the reader, recounting a phone call from her sister in which she hears tent revivalist preacher David Terrell's plans to raise his son Randall from the dead. The call recalls Johnson to her childhood, and the next time we see Terrell, it's in Johnson's memories.

"Holy Ghost Girl" is the story of Johnson's childhood on the Sawdust Trail, a circuit of tent revivals she traveled with a group of revivalists, her mother and her younger brother Gary. Though Johnson is the narrator, the story is really Terrell's. Absent from the stage, it is clear he is still the principal actor, as his every action affects Johnson and indeed, a whole community of "Terrellites" who believe Terrell's word is holy law.

In an era where religion — and its place in society — are at the forefront of our national consciousness, Johnson's memoir serves as a cautionary tale. The paradox evident throughout the narrative is a devotion to the Christian God, but an inability to lead a life of Christian standards on anything but a surface level. Saints under the lights of the revival tent, those who put on the mantle of holiness, take it off to commit adultery behind closed doors and smokescreen

Johnson's own mother is guilty, as is Terrell, though both are publicly religious. Terrell, a "con man, a prophet and performer," is also closest thing Johnson has to a father.

Though he is the lover of mother eventual father of Johnson's halfsisters, Terrell never quite achieves relation to Johnson herself. His marriage to her mother is hollow and imaginary, existing nowhere but the mind of her mother, who follows him throughout Johnson's years as a child, sometimes leaving Johnson and her brother to suffer maltreatment at the hands of believers she barely knows.

Johnson suffers from physical abuse and neglect while staying with Sister Waters, a sinister believer who every night kicked Johnson's brother "to the john, saying it was time for him to learn to pee in the pot" while Johnson and the other children cried and tried to stop her. She is forced to eat her own vomit at the hands of Sister Coleman. And during her time with the Smiths (no one quite knows how the children wound up there), she is forced to fake a conversion experience to be allowed to use the restroom.

BOOK REVIEW

"Her lack of bitterness

also left me

wondering what thoughts

and feelings Johnson herself experienced in evaluating her childhood."

This apparent paradox — this life of darkness and light, sin alongside outward holiness — is ultimately what leads Johnson herself > to abandon the church at 17, be $c\ o\ m\ i\ n\ g$ instead "a doubt-ridden Episcopalian with Buddhist tendencies."

Despite her troubled childhood, Johnson forgives Terrell and her mother again and again. "Holy Ghost Girl" is a look at Terrell's world through the eyes of a child, without apparent skepticism or anger. Her lack of vitriol is the most noticeable feature of the book. In some ways, this is an incredible feat. Johnson, who shows an impressive ability to divorce herself from emotion in her tale, manages to avoid the easy way out, shaping her mother and Terrell into real, fully human characters instead of using the book as a platform for ax-grinding (which could have been warranted, given her treat-

I would characterize her approach as mature. To fill her pages with latent bitterness and paint her mother and Terrell as villains fails to recognize the human truth that even those who commit heinous crimes are, in fact, people.

Terrell and her mother achieve kind of redemption through Johnson's characterization.

However, her lack of bitterness also left me wondering what thoughts and feelings Johnson herself experienced in evaluating her childhood. Neither her mother nor Terrell were held to scrutiny, and she also consistently fails to explain miracles the magical Terrell allegedly performs. For example, there is the story of The Woman Who Used to Be Big, whose mysteriously large and distended stomach disappears when Terrell touches her. Curiously, after her healing, her skirt falls to the ground, and she is left nearly naked in front of the congregation, a suggestion, perhaps, of Terrell's real motivation.

Johnson's loaded gun reappears in the closing of the book, during the funeral scene. Through her childhood, miracles are never examined, but until now, the question of real or not real hasn't been quite so pressing. Those Terrell healed might not have had real problems in the first place. But Randall's death — his very real death — was no stunt. He had been suffering for years with a hemorrhagic condition.

When a miracle is truly nec- "Holy Ghost Girl" is Donna Johns essary, the gun misfires. Terrell himself doesn't even attempt the resurrection. It is this that suggests to me of all the things Johnson labels Terrell as, "con man" is the religion throughout her childhood.

It's a good book, but one that, like Terrell's ministry, only scratch-

es the surface of something much bigger and more profound, a book that fails to value absolute truth among what is holy. But some ideas aren't worth sacrificing to the truth. The idea of the father, the idea of miracles — should these be laid on the altar and offered up? Based on Johnson's treatment of these figures when she recounts her childhood, I'd say she thinks

Piled Higher & Deeper Ph D.

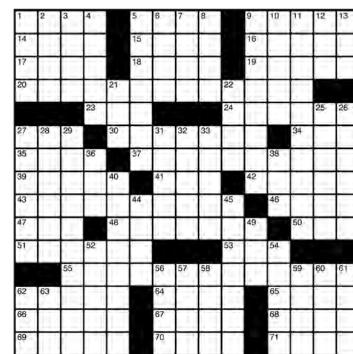

DAILY PUZZLES

Across

- 1 Gives pieces to
- 5 Space-saving abbr. 9 Academy teacher
- 14 Leak slowly
- 16 Didn't despair
- 15 Prep, as apples for applesauce
- 17 Support girder 18 Teatro alla Scala highlight
- 19 From days gone by
- 20 Post-marathon sounds?
- 23 Salon supply

- 24 Scottie's relative 27 ID theft target
- 30 Wined and dined 34 Messenger
- 35 Bygone depilatory 37 Golfer's outdated set of clubs?
- 39 Egyptian leader between Gamal and Hosni
- 41 MIV ÷ II 42 Pester, puppy-style
- 43 Casualty of an all-night poker game?
- 46 "__ be young again!" 47 SFO posting
- 48 Welcome sight for early explorers 50 Poetic dusk
- 51 "Thy Neighbor's Wife" author
- 53 Ill-fated fruit picker
- 55 Problem for Sherlock when he's
- out of tobacco?
- 62 Eastern adders?
- 64 Smart
- 65 Corp. money mgrs. 66 Sax range
- 67 Rolling rock 68 Berlusconi's bone
- 69 Is without 70 One bounce, in baseball 71 Kids
- Down
- 1 "A likely story!"
- 2 Country's McEntire 3 Crux
- 4 Bit of mistletoe 5 Dress uniform decoration
- 6 Empty-truck weight 7 Desertlike

Answers at www.baylorlariat.com

- 8 Route to an illogical conclusion 9 Expressed an opinion on "The Dan Patrick Show," say
- 10 Many converted apartments
- 11 Sign of omission 12 __ Aviv
- 13 Like some socks after laundry day
- 21 Whence BMWs
- 22 Floored
- 25 Hard-wired
- 26 Crayola Factory's Pennsylvania home
- 27 Get testy with
- 28 Madrid madam 29 City whose average elevation is
- 31 Dizzy with delight 32 Prospero's spirit servant 33 High-end camera
- 36 Borrow money from 38 __ Grande

below sea level

"Star Trek" TV show 44 De Matteo of "The Sopranos" 45 Patella 49 Netflix rental

40 Prophetic attire worn by most doomed characters on the original

- 52 Sentence finisher? 54 Florida attraction
- 57 Deposed ruler
- 58 Modern recorder
- 56 Kareem's coll. team
- 59 "Given that ..."
- 60 Chime in at a blog 61 Those, in Tijuana
- 62 Olympics entrant: Abbr. 63 Actress Arthur

SPORTS WRITER

Softball season is more than halfway over and the No. 16 Baylor Lady Bears have three more series left against Big 12 teams.

The Lady Bears (30-10, 3-5 Big 12) are currently fifth in the Big 12, so there is a lot of work to be done if they want to compete in the post-

However, those statistics may be misleading because Baylor has already squared off against the best two teams in the Big 12 in No. 1 Oklahoma and No. 7 Texas.

While Baylor was competitive in those games, it couldn't pull out

Baylor's only wins against ranked opponents were against No. 2 Arizona State and No. 20 Hawaii.

After losing three in a row against No. 1 Oklahoma, the Lady Bears got a much-needed win against Texas State on Tuesday, in which junior first baseman Holly Holl went 3-4 and tied a career high with four RBIs.

While you might hope for an easier win, if I were to draw up the game to get us prepared for Oklahoma State, it would look like that," head coach Glenn Moore said. "Texas State challenged us in every facet of the game and made us work hard for everything."

Baylor will take any win it can get after being in a slump as of late. The Lady Bears began the season and struggled offensively, but they improved and went on a 14-game winning streak.

The Big 12 only has seven teams after the departure of Missouri and Texas A&M, but the conference is still strong with only one team under .500. Baylor should have some confidence as it tries to finish off conference play because of its competitiveness against the best two teams.

Oklahoma is first in the nation in pitching with a .95 ERA, but Baylor did generate 16 hits in its three game series.

Freshman infielder Sarah Smith showed promise by getting on base two times during her three at-bats on Sunday.

The offense needs to continue being aggressive because Baylor is the second-worst batting team in the Big 12. Facing Oklahoma and Texas may have dropped percentages, but the Lady Bears need to take advantage of facing unranked

Baylor is hitting .299 and has a .418 slugging percentage. The team also has produced 181 runs and generated 306 base hits.

Baylor also needs to improve on its on-base percentage, which is currently at .370. The Lady Bears are last in the Big 12 in home runs. Head coach Glenn Moore wanted to transition into a power offense, but most of the power hits turn into fly outs.

Pitching has been vastly inconsistent despite the talent on the roster. The pitching staff is third in the Big 12 with a 1.76 ERA but has struggled in conference play.

Baylor is fourth when only factoring in Big 12 games with a 3.76 ERA while giving up 56 hits, 42 runs and 35 walks. Freshman right-handed pitcher Heather Stearns has had the opportunity to close games and gain experience.

Against Iowa State, Stearns came in for junior left-handed pitcher Whitney Canion who had struggled that day after giving up

Stearns didn't allow a hit, and Baylor earned the come-from-behind win 7-5.

Senior right-handed pitcher Courtney Repka and junior righthanded pitcher Liz Paul, who led the team to an NCAA tournament berth last year, have struggled as relief pitchers, but all three Big 12 teams Baylor faced are hitting at .300 or better.

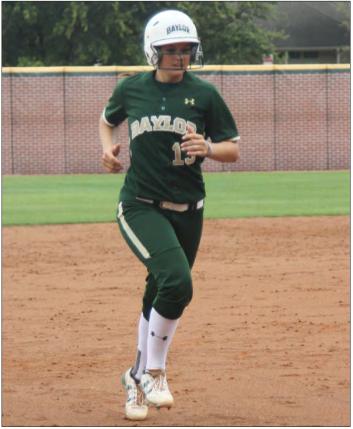

Canion has struggled in Big 12 play, giving up 27 hits while striking out 36. Canion has also allowed many walks, which is uncharacteristic of her

However, Canion got a confidence boost against Texas State by striking out 10 batters to help the Lady Bears pull out a win.

Sometimes, teams may overlook certain parts of the game if they continue to win, but the Lady Bears need to stay focused and keep improving to get back to another College World Series. "I think we need to build on the little victories and really get our confidence up," senior outfielder Kathy Shelton said. Baylor will have a chance to improve their record at 6:30 p.m. Friday as it takes on Oklahoma State at Getterman Stadium.

MATT HELLMAN | LARIAT PHOTO EDITOR

Senior infielder Kelsi Ketter runs toward third base during Baylor's 7-5 win over Iowa State on March 30.

Follow us on Twitter

@BULariat

@BULariatSports

@DFTBPodcast

Goat head sent to Chicago

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Goats that previously appeared at Chicago's Wrigley Field were alive and kicking.

But not Wednesday, when a goat's head was left in a box outside the home of the Cubs addressed to team chairman Tom Ricketts

Ricketts is in negotiations with city officials and neighborhood business people about Wrigley Field's $300 million renovation.

Cubs spokesman Julian Green says staff at Wrigley Field discovered the package and immediately called police.

Chicago police spokesman Officer Veejay Zala says Chicago police responded to a call around 2:30 p.m. indicating an "intimidating package" had been received. Zala would not elaborate, saying police are investigating.

Chicago legend says a restaurant owner allegedly cursed the Cubs when they wouldn't let his pet goat into Wrigley Field.

Bears optimistic after rocky start to season

By Daniel Hill SPORTS WRITER

The Baylor Bears baseball team experienced unprecedented success last season by posting a 49-17 record. Even though it is still early in the season, this year's Baylor team has a 17-16 record on the diamond and is already one loss away from equaling last season's total.

This year's Baylor team prefers to play a style of small ball. When a runner gets on first, the offense will do whatever it takes to get one run across home plate. This means a healthy number of sacrifice bunts in an effort to advance runners to score.

"I feel like as a team we are always one big hit away," senior shortstop Jake Miller said. "I feel like last year, the baseball gods were on our side and things went our way. This year, it's not exactly like we're doing bad, but at times we're not doing great. We need to get timely hits. That's baseball. Runners in scoring position with two outs, you've got to scratch them across. We're not always going to get a sacrifice fly and they're not just going to give it to you. We've got to just keep pulling away and the hits will fall.

With a 5-3 conference record, the Bears are third in the Big 12 and are hoping to jump into more success this season when the Bears host No. 9 Oklahoma this weekend for a three-game series.

Senior left fielder Nathan Orf hits the ball against UT Arlington at Baylor Ballpark on Tuesday. Baylor went on to their last two games respectively, the Bears' bats are starting to come alive at just the right time of the season now that the Big 12 schedule is full speed ahead.

"Getting hits, scoring a lot more fter scoring 11 and 14 runs in runs, and pitching have been doing a slow start and struggled to find the job too," senior right fielder Nathan Orf said. "These have been better team wins."

> After losing major contributors from last year's squad, it's understandable that the Bears got off to their identity as a team. Catcher Josh Ludy, pitcher Josh Turley, first baseman Max Muncy, and center fielder Logan Vick were all big contributors to last year's team that have moved on.

The Bears have played three Big 12 series so far this season and they have won every single series except the 1-1 split on the road against Oklahoma State.

"We all know clearly what we face and we all know the last 20 games or so are going to predominantly be played on the road," head coach Steve Smith said. "We've got OU here and we've got five series left and three or four midweek games left so it's that time of the year where you ought to know where you are and you ought to know what type of team you are."

With 19 regular season contests remaining before the end of the season, there's still time for the Bears to get on a hot streak and enter the Big 12 Conference Baseball Championship on a positive note.

Senior leadership from Orf, third baseman Cal Towey and shortstop Jake Miller has led the team in the clubhouse and on the field. With Tuesday night's 14-4 route of UT Arlington, the Bears overall record officially moves to 17-16. Even though the Bears have a winning record, Orf expects

"I guess it's good [to be above .500], we wish our record was way better than that but we don't really pay much attention to it you know," Orf said. "We're just kind of taking it day by day and looking forward to the weekend and hopefully we stay on this side of the winning column for the rest of the season."

CLASSIFIEDS

Call and Schedule Today! (254)710-3407

HOUSING

DUPLEX for lease! 2 BR / 1 Bath. Walk to class, Clean, Well-Kept. Rent starting at $425/month. Ask about our Summer Discount! Please call 754-4834 for an appointment to view.

BILLS PAID! North Waco duplexes, newly refurbished, available this summer. 1BR/1BA ($450), 2BR/1BA ($800), 2BR/2BA ($900), & 3BR/2BA ($1200) units, with W/D & all utilities paid, incl cable & internet. Call 254/716-2134.

ONE BR APARTMENTS AVAIL-Walking Distance to Campus. Affordable Rates starting at Rates. $370/month. Knotty Pine Apartments, Driftwood Apartments, and Cypress Point Apartments. ASK ABOUT OUR SUMMER DISCOUNT! Please call 754-4834 for an appointment to view the properties.

HOUSE FOR LEASE-5 BR, 2.5 Bath, Washer/Dryer Pro-

Convenient to Camvided. pus. Rent: $1200/month. Call 754-4834 for more information.

EMPLOYMENT

Paid Summer Sales and Marketing Internship, Send Resume to sguy@ucampusmedia.com, http://universitydirectories.com/internships/ outside-sales-internship/

SCHEDULE YOUR CLASSI-FIED AD IN THE BAYLOR LAR-IAT TODAY! It's Easy... Call 254-710-3407 or email

Beverage cart & hospitality positions available at local golf course.

Make great money for having fun in the sun.

Must be outgoing, dependable & attractive.

Weekends and summer availability a must. Call for interview 254-876-2837

First lady wades into debate over gun violence

DON BABWIN And Nedra Pickler ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO - First lady Michelle Obama made a deeply personal entrance into the gun debate Wednesday, the eve of a showdown in Congress, by comparing herself to the honor student from her hometown shot to death a week after performing as a majorette in the presidential inaugural parade.

Obama told a conference on youth violence that the new gun regulations her husband proposed in response to Connecticut's Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting deserve a vote in Congress. But she says reducing daily gun deaths in places like Chicago, with its 500 homicides last year, also will require an intensive effort by community leaders.

As part of a rare foray into a policy debate, Obama highlighted the case of 15-year-old Hadiya Pendleton, shot in the back Jan. 29 while hanging out with friends at a park, about a mile from the Obamas' South Side home. Obama attended Pendleton's funeral and said she was struck by how familiar the Pendleton family seemed to

"Hadiya Pendleton was me and I was her," Obama said. "But I got to grow up and go to Princeton and Harvard Law School and have a career and a family and the most blessed life I could ever imagine."

Obama said the only difference between herself and the young people killed on the Chicago streets is that she had a few more advantages — involved adults, good schools, a supportive community and a safe neighborhood.

'That was the difference between growing up and becoming a lawyer, a mother and first lady of the United States and being shot dead at the age of 15," Obama said, her voice gripped with emotion.

The speech was Obama's first public remarks on gun violence since the Sandy Hook shooting in December took the lives of 20 students and six faculty and reignited a national debate over gun control. With the fate of the administration's efforts still uncertain, the White House was mounting an allhands-on-deck push this week to keep the public engaged.

The president delivered a

First lady Michelle Obama speaks about 15-year-old Hadiya Pendleton, who was shot and killed on the south side of Chicago earlier this year, during a luncheon Wednesday at the Chicago Hilton in Chicago.

speech Monday in Connecticut, and 12 family members of Sandy Hook victims joined him on the return flight to Washington and have since been lobbying members of Congress. Vice President Joe Biden and Attorney General Eric Holder promoted gun legislation Tuesday at the White House, and Biden was set to make the case again Thursday on MSNBC's "Morning Joe."

The Senate was planning an initial vote Thursday to begin debating gun legislation, with some Republicans attempting to block consideration of the measure. Two pivotal senators announced a bipartisan deal Wednesday to expand background checks to more gun sales, which could build support for President Barack Obama's drive to tighten firearms laws. But the legislation faces strong opposition from the National Rifle Association and lawmakers who say it would violate the Second Amendment right to bear arms.

"Right now, my husband is fighting as hard as he can and engaging as many people as he can to pass common sense reforms to protect our children from gun violence," Obama said to applause. "And these reforms deserve a vote in Congress."

Obama was addressing Chicago business and community leaders at a luncheon hosted by Mayor Rahm Emanuel, her husband's former chief of staff, who is trying to raise money to fund programs for at-risk youth.

Texas Senate OKs drug tests for welfare

By IIM VERTUNO ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN - Some Texas applicants for welfare would be subjected to drug testing and would be permanently cut off if they fail three times under a bill passed Wednesday by the state Senate.

The bill covers Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program applicants. The program, which provides poor people with money for food, clothing, housing and other basic needs, distributes about $90 million to more than 100,000 Texans annually. The amount of the payment depends on family size and income.

"Taxpayer money should not be used to subsidize someone's drug habit," bill sponsor Sen. Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, said before the bill sailed through on a 31-0 vote that sent it to the House.

The program already requires adult TANF applicants to sign a pledge not to sell or use drugs. Nelson's bill would move Texas in line with seven other states that require testing. It would not cover other welfare programs such as food stamps or other state benefit programs.

Not all applicants would be tested, but all would be required to undergo a screening assessment, likely a questionnaire, to determine their risk of drug use. Anyone with a previous felony drug conviction or failed drug test or who is otherwise deemed a high risk for drug use would be tested.

Applicants who test positive would be barred from collecting benefits for 12 months. They could reapply in six months if they complete a substance abuse program. Three failed drug tests would result in a permanent ban.

The bill would still allow the applicants' children to receive benefits through a designated third

"My intent was never to harm the children," Nelson said.

She said many Texas employers require pre-employment drug testing and said her bill may help people find jobs and get off welfare.

"We're not only going to help them get off drugs," Nelson said. 'We're going to help them get a

The Senate is also considering a separate bill that would require similar screening and drug testing for those who apply for unemployment benefits. Gov. Rick Perry has expressed support for both drug decision to delay the headliner's announcement was due to an intentional publicity strategy developed by Chamber. At this time, the headliner has already been determined and confirmed, Minnaar said. Minnaar said Chamber was planning to release information about the event tomorrow.

HEADLINER from Page 1

"When we start planning for the event, we have to start planning for 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. The headliner is a big part of that, but it's not the entire day," Minnaar said. "So we spent a lot of time focusing on the other things that were going on and wanted to publicize that stuff and get people excited about that, and hopefully create this idea that Dia is about more than just a person who plays a concert for an

Some information about Dia entertainment has already been released and is shown on banners throughout campus, including one that promotes the performance of a magician and one that advertises that students will be able to take pictures with a live monkey. The decision to delay the announcepense for the headliner, but to increase publicity for other activities like these at the event, Minnaar

In fact, it's Gidley's mentality - that students would attend Dia only to see the headliner band - that Chamber hopes to fight

"We want people to focus on the day as a whole," Chamber President T. J. Hales said. "It's tough when it's the headliner because people want to know, but we're emphasizing the day as a whole."

has led to frustration for some.

"I look forward to the musical performances on Dia every year. I'm frustrated that Chamber has vet to announce of the headliner," Dustin Rutledge, a senior from Richardson, said. Gidley said he believes the event would attract more students with an earlier announcement about the headliner

"Even if the performance blows everyone who attends away, it would attract more students if we knew what to expect," he said.

NKOREA from Page 1 -

Cost is an issue as the Air Force copes with automatic federal budget cuts imposed when Congress failed to reach a deal to avert them.

The Pacific is least affected among other parts of the Air Force because of the Obama administration's emphasis on Asia and the Pacific and because of current tensions on the Korean peninsula. Even so, an F-16 squadron in Alaska — 18th Aggressor Squadron at Eielson Air Force Base— is being grounded along with others elsewhere in the country.

Carlisle said the Air Force's core activities - maintenance and operations — are disproportionately the flexibility to cut other spend-

Congress didn't allow the branch, for example, to cancel acquisitions programs even when they're behind schedule or not meeting requirements, he said. It also can't cut airmen salaries or health care coverage.

On top of this, the Air Force is implementing a year's worth of budget cuts in six months. That's because the services were told Congress would come to an agreement to avoid the budget cuts and so the Air Force didn't plan for them when the current fiscal year started in October.

Don't See What You're Looking For?

Not valid with any other offers. Exp: 05-22-13

Woodway Plaza • 824 Hewitt Dr. (In front of the Walmart Supercenter) • 254-666-0100

Tell Your Favorite Business About Our Coupon Page And See What They Have To Offer!