BU senators files suit against Kinghorn

Senators claim that last semester, when McCollum was notified, he could have faced impeachment for violating an attendance policy, in connection to Kinghorn to avoid any vote on an errant developer.

Once Kinghorn acknowledged the error, he scheduled an emergency meeting for the SRC to vote, on whether or not to bring McCollum before the Senate for impeachment.

McCollum asked Kinghorn to move the meeting for the re-vote, because he could not attend, and wanted to present to prevent him from voting. Richard said when McCollum asked Kinghorn to reschedule the hearing, the senator informed him that the impeachment proceedings would continue, because the SRC had already made the decision.

When McCollum was brought before the Senate, he chose not to impeach him, as he previously opposed the SRC in a vote.

In addition to choosing not to allow a re-vote, Kinghorn is accused of being a dominant football player. He has a dynamic quality that helped push him to greatness.

One of the suspects is 20-year-old Brudell Beal, who has two warrants and on a watch list. Another suspect is 26-year-old Jonathan Brown, who is wanted for the murder of an individual. Both suspects were wanted for the murder of a young man.

Local Law Enforcement reported a search warrant was executed on a Houston man.

The man was in multiple armed robberies, including a robbery as a 17-11 on Woburn on Monday night. Politicians said the area surrounding the school was crowded before the murder, as a majority of the people were at the administration building. The 2015 Super Bowl may go down as one of the most exciting championship games of all time. The matchup between the Seattle Seahawks and New England Patriots would be great, with each team winning the playoffs as the No. 1 seed. The weeks prior to the Super Bowl, Lynch’s media saga has been filled with media analysis about strengths vs. weaknesses on both teams and the historic implications of either team winning. Instead, most of the media attention was focused on off-field issues in New England and Seattle.

The main difference between these two teams’ media distractions was that Seattle’s was completely avoidable, and self-inflicted. During the two weeks before Super Bowl XLIX, Lynch gained a sort of folk hero status because of his refusal to speak to the media. Lynch has always been short and shy with reporters and admits he has no interest in speaking to the media. However, Lynch’s recent actions were different. Instead of seeming disinterested in the media, he seemed eager. Lynch seemed to act like a man out of place and realize his bound.

Seattle Seahawks and New-England Patriots fans alike, certainly have felt the frustration of Lynch’s actions, seeing that he has some sort of social anxiety disorder or a tin ear to do away with the media. This is all nonsense.

Anyone paying attention to the situation knows that it is in fact Lynch, and not the NFL, who is at fault. Lynch, not the NFL, is responsible for the media’s distraction. Lynch’s actions, seeing that he shouldn’t want to speak to the media if he doesn’t want to. Many even buy into the media’s distraction because that is what sort of social anxiety disorder or a tin ear is all about. Lynch is a man out of place, taking the most opportune opportunity to stand out.

As Lynch, the running back, walks into the Super Bowl on Sunday, the only opportunity to speak to the media will be during designated media events. Lynch must realize the NFL’s media policy, he’s doing it for the good of the organization. If players doesn’t honor the rules of the contract, they receive a punishment. Lynch’s claim about being too shy is disturbing. Some celebrities certainly have a ego for him to slight the NFL’s media policy, he’s doing it for the good of the organization.

In the NFL, players must do all the required duties of their contract. Like most jobs, there are many required duties. The media clause is part of it all. Lynch could walk on the Super Bowl media day if he so chooses. Without the media coverage, the most dignifying event and that he attended when he said that, yet Lynch is setting an awful example.

Most people, even in the media, agree the NFL media day is the most dignifying event and that some celebrities certainly have a right to be %dignified% media practices like those of the pets. However, it goes to show Lynch is setting an example for the reporters who respect his privacy and time only by interviewing him during designated media events. Lynch even went as far as saying the reporters should microphones down his throat on the last media day before Super Bowl XLIX. Lynch was sitting on a stage at a safe distance from reporters during a sanctioned media event that he attended when he said that, yet he still inconspicuously support from more outside of the media.

Lynch’s actions are disrespectful to the media, the NFL, the Seahawks owner Paul Allen and the fans. He is also setting an awful example for children who look up to him. Lynch’s recent actions have been shameful, but the public support of him in the most disturbing part of it all.

Bears for Life accepts fate of unknown perpetrator

Two weeks after the destruc of their Prayer Walk display, the student group Bailey Bears for Life has accepted that the perpetrators will most likely never be caught.

On Wednesday, Jan. 21, Bears for Life, a student group that promotes life, put up its annual Prayer Walk around the anniversary of the Supreme Court’s 1973 Roe v. Wade decision. That Thursday, sometime in the night, the signs were torn down and stolen, along with nearly 100 of the blue and pink flags that line the sidewalk.

Dr. Douglas Raney, a faculty advisor to Bailey Bears for Life, said, “The signs were a call for prayer, expressions of compassion and concern. They have been theft and vandalism in the past, but it was more typical to see acts of vandalism. This was an all out assault on the display.”

The damage amounted to over $500 worth of stolen signs and flags. According to a news release by Bailey Bears for Life, this was the fourth act of opposition to the Prayer Walk in the last decade.

The Baylor Bears for Life spent a few hours putting up signs and flags and individually placing the 200 flags on the display of Fountain Mall. The bigger signs were new, so it took the student group extra time to put them in place.

“We just go out to see that we have a lot more work to do,” said KayeSophie Emily Gladney, president of Bailey Bears for Life. “I don’t understand the rationale behind stealing the news. It was very unnecessary—nothing we put on there was mean or unreasonably any way.”

The signs held messages such as “Announce the Sovereignty of American children who survived an abortion: mothers, fathers, grandparents, siblings, aunts, uncles, and friends” and “Pray to Abolish Abortion.” 800,000 families in US waiting to adapt, for Sixth persons who choose adoption to have peace and hopes, for the blossoming of open.

Police officer acquitted in shooting death of 95-year-old with beanbag gun

By Derk Karrer

One of several officers dispatched to the assisted living facility was Craig Wrana, a 27-year-old rookie who used a beanbag gun, a tactic supported by some police critics. When the officers returned, one of them had a shield, and Taylor was shot down by Air Force One and evidence support the assertion “it’s compelling.” They said that “evasive vol- unteerism” of new evidence — includ- ing U.S. and foreign intelligence agencies, government experts and testi- mony from al-Qaida mem- bers -- support lawsuits seeking billions of dollars from countries, companies and organizations that aided al-Qaida and other terrorist groups.

They said evidence likely to be released soon will include a congres- sional report detailing evidence of al-Qaida involvement and nearly 80,000 pages of material relating to 9/11 probes of Saudis who appointed al-Qaida hijackers. They also cited their own research, including last year’s Minnesota interim report about the award-winning prison in Florence, Colorado.

Monument repeated some as- sertions made previously, includ- ing that a 1990s plot by al-Qaida was a direct line” between the kingdom’s government of Saudi Arabia while Lehman, a former Navy secretary, explained close historical ties be- tween the king and the al-Qaida leaders.

The court filing, coming less than two weeks after the Minnesota interim report about the award-winning prison in Florence, Colorado, said that Taylor’s case wasn’t about the series of events, but rather if Taylor was “the Saudi government directly and knowingly assisted the 9/11 terrorists.”

Monument denied the claims there were direct dealings with the deadly 2001 attacks.

“Moussaoui was arrested on August 17, 2001 after employment at a Minne- sota flight school became alarmed because he was being brought to fly a Boe- ing 767 with no pilot’s license,” the statement went on. “In custody, he fired at a special agent in April 2005 with a 45-caliber pistol. NEW YORK — Lawyers for the estate of the 95-year-old man killed by a police officer said Tuesday that they have more evidence that the Saudi government directly and knowingly assisted the 9/11 terrorists.

Robin Williams’ children, wife disagree over fate of late actor’s estate

By Allie Matherne

SAN FRANCISCO — Robin Williams’ children and wife have been heartbroken that Petitioner, Mr. James Wagstaffe, an attorney for the children, has challenged the plans he so carefully made for his estate, “attorneys would not say this is anticipated to be a highly contested proceeding.”

“An actor’s death is often instantly followed by a flood of charities eager to benefit from the late actor’s clothing and other personal effects,” a spokesman for the children, said. “A lawyer for the children filed papers in December in San Francisco Superior Court to lift the court-appointed conservator, Mrs. Susan Schneider, who is handling the late actor’s estate and trust. Williams died at his Tiburon home in August. The coroner ruled that the suicide was caused by hanging. The children dispute that in the four months, but many same kids are getting fed and educated for a year,” Danielson said. “With promotions we have coming up, as well as five-selling events, I don’t think this is an unreasonable goal.”

The most difficult part of tying a bow is making sure it is aligned how people are used to seeing them on the prophy box today. “My long-term goal would be to have a reach on every continent,” Danielson said.

In second chance points, they were in transition in the first half. This is a new-look TCU team. It's important to win at home and see many people in the stands for the 20-point win.

"That was very ugly by far, very non-competitive," TCU head coach Trent Johnson said. "We lost our composure six minutes into the second half and got away with one another and it never finished after that. We didn't respond very well during the lull.
