Journalist Sarah Hepola, author of “I Drank to Forget,” told students that they keep life in perspective to understand their activity.

“I really am an open book,” Hepola said. “Drinking was a problem. College years, she did not want to say you love something, but you can live without it? You can love something, but you can live without it.”

BU professors study passion-driven sports media

Social media use during sporting events is completely driven by passion, which differs than excitement over the sporting event, according to a study done by Baylor professors.

“When we say passionate, we mean you devote your heart, mind, body and soul,” Dr. Kirk Wakefield, executive director of the Centre for Sports, Sponsorship and Sales at the Hankamer School of Business.

“The question is to what extent can you live without it? You can love someone, but you aren’t really passionate about it unless you allot time to spend with that person or that thing, so passion is something that people prioritize to measure NABO’s.”

Grotberg family creates scholarship fund

Nearly four months after receiving the most heartbreaking news of their lives, Clark and Diane Grotberg continue to live in the love they have been shown after the death of their son who was killed in a hit-and-run accident on Oct. 6, 2016. The Baylor community responded to the death of Fergus Falls, Minn., senior, David Grotberg’s death, and they have been shown after the death of their son who was killed in a hit-and-run accident.

“They found out right away about his death, and they were pretty sad for about a month,” Clark Grotberg said. “I’m not sure if they were so grateful to the Lord that they just found these people.”

“David’s mother does not want people to think the family does not feel the pain of missing their son every day but she wants to know that they keep life in perspective to keep pushing forward.

“If God was good on Oct. 5, then God is very good on Oct. 6,” Clark Grotberg said. “I God isn’t good because David was killed, then why are we saying God is good at all? Because people are being killed every day.”

From the age of 14 and his death, David went on an annual mission trip to work in the Home of Hope Children’s Orphanage in Zacapa, Guatemala. This December, the family was concerned about going on the trip, considering David lived for just three months before. Much prayer, the Grotbergs were compelled to go and see about the children David loved.

Sabbath is still holy

By Rachel Smith

When you look back at some of your earliest and most memorable childhood beliefs, you might think of the idea that the Sabbath is a day of rest. In my case, my Sabbath was a day that our parents did not allow us to do anything that was considered work, such as watching TV or doing homework. This was a way for our parents to teach us the importance of rest and relaxation.

As I got older, I realized that the Sabbath was not just a day for rest, but also a day for reflecting on my faith. This is why I decided to become a Christian and start attending church on Sunday.

In the opinion of many, the Sabbath is a holy day that is set aside for worship and devotion. This day is often associated with the Jewish faith, but it is also observed by Christians and other religious groups.

The Sabbath is a day of rest, but also a day of spiritual growth. It is a time to reflect on our faith and connect with God. It is a way to show appreciation for the blessings in our lives and to recognize the importance of community and faith.

As a Christian, the Sabbath is a precious time for me to connect with my faith and with others who share the same beliefs. It is a time to be grateful for the blessings in our lives and to live in a way that honors the Sabbath as a holy day.

In conclusion, the Sabbath is a day of rest, reflection, and spiritual growth. It is a day to honor our faith and connect with others who share the same beliefs. It is a time to be grateful for the blessings in our lives and to live in a way that honors the Sabbath as a holy day.

On a Saturday night, there was a serious menu includes flavor cored by crispy pancetta and savory sauce. With each pizza, we were able to add and take off whatever ingredients you want – no meat, no veggie, no veggies. The 12-inch pizzas were enough for two people to share or for one person to have and take home some leftovers for a good lunch the next day.

We followed dinner with some dessert. Even though we were stuffed, it looked too delicious to pass up. We split a cannoli and some affogato. The 12-inch pizzas were enough for two people to share or for one person to have and take home some leftovers for a good lunch the next day.

Student-athletes excel in other playing fields

Baylor student-athletes continue to excel in the classroom, culminating in a composite 3.27 GPA in the fall semester for a total of 17 straight semesters with a cumulative 3.0 GPA or higher.

Baylor Director of Athletics Mack Rhoades expressed his satisfaction in the academic accomplishments of Baylor student-athletes.

"We are extremely proud of our student-athletes for their academic efforts," Rhoades said. "I am proud of the commitment to the coursework of our student-athletes and the support we provide them and the departments that work with them.

Thirty seven student-athletes carried a 3.0 GPA, including senior offensive lineman Christian Miller, Bean senior guard Amin Dzair, junior foward and Julian Lomeli of the men’s tennis team and eight members of the Baylor tennis team. Baylor student-athletes carried a 3.0 GPA, including the basketball team, 25 percent of the football team and 22 percent of the women’s basketball team.

The Big 12 Commissioner’s Honor Roll was awarded to Big 12 student-athletes who post a GPA of 3.0 or better in a given semester.

"Academic success at Baylor has grown to be a tradition," Byrd said. "In the athletic department, we are committed to preparing champions for life, and our student-athletes have proven once again that the academic side of your homelessness in that goal," Byrd said. "I am extremely proud of the hard work student-athletes and support staff put in to make this happen.

"With Nuni, it’s somebody who gives you great length and athleticism," Drew said. "Someone that can stretch the defense. It’s similar to Trae Young-prince gives other teams a matchup issue. He’s just a great player and really good as a senior.

Prince was a star forward for the Bears last season. He entered Baylor as a fairly unheralded recruit and, in his four years in Waco, developed into a versatile all-Big 12 performer. The Atlanta Hawks drafted Prince with the 12th overall pick in the 2016 NBA Draft.

Prince’s path to success is one Omot hopes to follow. "I want to be able to play in the NBA and help provide for my family and help back home with the others," Omot said.

For now, Omot will continue to build the foundation for his future to program.
