The Black Glasses Film Festival is an event that showcases original films made by the film and digital media students at Baylor. The festival is held annually at the Hippodrome Theatre, which is a part of the Baylor Theatre Department. According to Kendrick, the festival is a way for the Baylor film and digital media students to showcase their hard work and creativity. He said, “It’s amazing how much adding the right sound effects to an animation can make it come to life.”

The festival features a variety of films, including comedy, drama, and documentaries. The films are selected by a jury of professional filmmakers, who evaluate the films based on quality, story, visual technique, editing, cinematography, and other aspects of production. The festival is open to both students and professionals, and it is open to the public. The festival is a great opportunity for students to gain exposure and build their resumes.

The Black Glasses Film Festival is a popular event, and it is always well-attended. The Hippodrome Theatre is located in Waco, Texas, and it is a beautiful venue for film screenings. The festival is held on the last Friday of April each year, and it is a great opportunity to see some of the best films that are being produced by students at Baylor.

The festival is also a great opportunity for students to connect with other filmmakers and industry professionals. The festival includes various networking events and panel discussions, which provide students with the opportunity to learn from experienced filmmakers and build relationships with potential mentors.

works with around 47 vendors that fill their shelves with fairly traded products. These vendors are referred to as “middlemen,” who are responsible for bringing the fair trade products to America. Williams is in frequent contact with the market’s vendors and said she has personal relationships with them. “I feel connected to the people that we work with,” Williams said. When selecting the vendors she wishes to partner with, Williams said she often asks them about working conditions and how the proceeds go, in accordance with FTFT’s rules. After selecting vendors, Williams chooses the products she wishes to sell in the Fair Trade Market. “We buy what we would like,” Williams said. “And what do consider ‘cool’ or ‘want’ in Waco.” Williams said she pays attention to sales and trends when deciding which products to carry. “I’m always trying to think outside of who I am and more like the Waco audience or the audience for the shop,” Williams said. Popular items include headbands made by women in Ghana and wooden puzzles crafted by artisans in India. Williams said Global Mamas is a favorite vendor that provides the Fair Trade Market with Ghanaian headbands, which are signed on the tag by the women that make each headband. Jessica Yaa, the sales and marketing representative from Global Mamas, said their headbands sell well to kids and adults because the fit is comfortable, the cotton is sturdy and the color is eye-catching. Yaa said 60 percent of Global Mamas’ products are made from repurposed or recycled materials. The headbands are made from hapt fabric scraps leftover from larger products such as garments or home goods, she said. Yaa said this fulfills the FTFT requirement that all businesses should be environmentally conscious. Global Mamas is a nonprofit organization that grew from the need for retail outlets for women batikers on the coast of Ghana, Yaa said. According to the Global Mamas website, building a fabric art form that uses a traditional waxing and dying technique on fabric to create a unique, crackled style. Global Mamas has been operating for the past five years to enable women batikers with a sustainable way of selling their product. Yaa said the company has grown from working with the original six batikers, she said, to working with around 450 men and women to create traditional handicrafts throughout Ghana. Because Williams and the Fair Trade Market are in contact with the vendors on a monthly basis, the work partnerships have evolved into prosperous relationships. The long partnership between Global Mamas and World Cup’s Fair Trade Market has contributed to Global Mamas’ success as a nonprofit. “This growth is in large part sustained by committed wholesale partners like World Cup that regularly place orders with us and continue telling our story,” Yaa said. Another popular vendor that partners with the Fair Trade Market is Matr Boomie, which supplies the market with an assortment of wooden pieces such as puzzles, mazes, dice and even wooden nose prosthetics crafted by artisans in India. Allison said Williams said that one of her favorite purchases from the market was one of Matr Boomie’s sculpted wooden noses used for holding earrings. “Matr Boomie is a wholesale fair trade collection from India that marries modern design sensibility with inspiring traditional art forms,” in website says. Manish Gupta, the founder of Matr Boomie and former board member of the FTFT, played an instrumental role in the beginning stages of the Fair Trade Market. “Manish really helped us get started,” Allison said. Gupta said he helped the Fair Trade Market by providing products for sale at the shop. He said that he also helped with marketing collateral by promoting artisan signage to be displayed in the market. Gupta said because World Cup’s Fair Trade Market is a committed fair trade shop, the market is a natural partner with Matr Boomie. “World Cup has done an amazing job bringing awareness about fair trade in this community,” Gupta said. Manish also often sends work groups of volunteers and students of all ages to visit the Fair Trade Market to gain insight into what fair trade actually is and how it benefits communities in other countries. “I love the education aspect of it,” Allison said. According to Allison, every year, the work groups come into the market knowing more and more about fair trade. Allison said she believes that change will come about when people are demanding to know who made the products and that they were fairly paid. “To me,” Allison said, “the ideal world is when we do not have to put a fair trade label on things because everything is already ethically traded.”

Lady Bear athletes head to the next level

The Women’s National Basketball Association Draft on April 16 saw two Lady Bears hear their names called. These two players were instead senior guard Nina Davis going No. 12 to the Minnesota Lynx and senior guard Alexis Prince going No. 29 to the Phoenix Mercury.

Neither of them had to wait very long to land their next opportunity. The Women’s National Basketball Association Draft on April 16 saw two Lady Bears hear their names called. BAYLOR LARIAT RADIO—LIVE PLAY-BY-PLAY

Friday, April 28, 2017

Baylor senior first baseman Aaron Dishon says getting a win in Fort Worth was nice despite not winning the series, "It was nice coming out of TCU with one, " Dishon said. "Two obviously would have been nice, but good team that we have to come out and win the last game and that’s a good team."

Having won five of their last eight games, the Bears are getting momentum back on their side, especially on the offensive side.

Baylor head coach Steve Rodriguez says there is positive energy now that guys are swinging the bat well.

"It’s really fun when you have guys who are getting hot at the right time," Rodriguez said. "They have been overhitting the past really well. You can just feel it on our team. There’s something positive going on. It’s exciting to see, and hopefully we can carry it through this weekend."

The Jayhawks (21-20, 8-7) just picked up a series win over then-No. 19 Oklahoma to move to fourth in the conference standings.

Kansas is one of the youngest teams in the Big 12. The Jayhawks freshman class has the highest start percentage in the conference.

Junior Matt McLaughlin leads Kansas on offense with two home runs while accumulating 21 runs batted in. Freshman James C guerrino and Brett Vosik also contribute with 30 combined RBIs and home runs each.

Rodriguez says that the Jayhawks are not flashy, but they play well together and are tough to contain.

"They’re playing really well as a team," Rodriguez said. "Nothing really stands out as phenomenal, but you can just tell they play well together. If you don’t go in there prepared, they’re going to get you."

Kansas relief pitcher Stephen Villines was recently named to the NCBWA Midseason Stopper of the Year watch list for the best closer in the nation. Villines leads the Big 12 with 11 saves on the season.

The Bears have a nationally recognized player as well in junior Troy Montemayor who boasts a team-leading 1.71 earned run average while recording eight saves so far this year.

As for starting pitching, Baylor will send out the usual weekend rotation of junior Montana Parsons, senior Nick Lewis and freshman Cody Bradford. Parsons holds the best ERA of the three at 3.83 while having a 3-2 record on the season.

On offense, Dishon leads the team with a .316 batting percentage, six home runs and 25 RBIs. Additionally, freshman catcher Shea Langill currently also has six home runs and 15 RBIs.

The Bears and Jayhawks face off at 6 p.m. Friday, 2 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday in Lawrence, Kan.

"They’re playing really well as a team. Nothing really stands out as phenomenal, but you can just tell they play well together."

Baseball looks to better Big 12 record

Baylor baseball looks to move up in the Big 12 conference standings this weekend as they face Kansas in a weekend series in Lawrence, Kan.

The Bears (25-16, 6-9) are coming off of a hard-fought series against TCU in which they blew out the Horned Frogs in the second game but failed to pick up another win.

Baylor senior first baseman Aaron Dishon says getting a win in Fort Worth was nice despite not winning the series, "It was nice coming out of TCU with one, " Dishon said. "Two obviously would have been nice, but good team that we have to come out and win the last game and that’s a good team."

Kansas relief pitcher Stephen Villines was recently named to the NCBWA Midseason Stopper of the Year watch list for the best closer in the nation. Villines leads the Big 12 with 11 saves on the season.

The Bears have a nationally recognized player as well in junior Troy Montemayor who boasts a team-leading 1.71 earned run average while recording eight saves so far this year.

As for starting pitching, Baylor will send out the usual weekend rotation of junior Montana Parsons, senior Nick Lewis and freshman Cody Bradford. Parsons holds the best ERA of the three at 3.83 while having a 3-2 record on the season.

On offense, Dishon leads the team with a .316 batting percentage, six home runs and 25 RBIs. Additionally, freshman catcher Shea Langill currently also has six home runs and 15 RBIs.

The Bears and Jayhawks face off at 6 p.m. Friday, 2 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday in Lawrence, Kan.

HOUSTON — The Houston Texans addressed their need at quarterback by trading with Cleveland to select Clemson quarterback Deshaun Watson with the 12th overall pick in the NFL draft on Thursday night.

The Browns already have Houston's second-round pick this year and are set at quarterback with Baker Mayfield, the No. 1 overall pick last year.

The Texans traded away the 25th overall pick in this year's draft as well as their first-round pick next season to nab Watson.

The Browns then moved quickly, using their second-round pick to take Oklahoma State's Mason Rudolph.

“Confident in the password in the starting quarterback position,” coach Deshaun Watson said after being selected by the Houston Texans during the first round of the 2017 NFL football draft Thursday in Philadelphia.

The Browns already have Baker Mayfield, the No. 1 overall pick last year, and scrambler Tyrod Taylor, who was acquired in a trade with Buffalo in March.

Houston was desperate to upgrade its offense, and with Cleveland already having a top-10 pick in the draft, the Texans were able to move up to 12 to select Watson.

He joins a team featuring star receiver DeAndre Hopkins, who also went to Clemson.

Watson threw for 4,593 yards and 41 touchdowns last season to lead Clemson to the national title.

The two-time Heisman Trophy finalist led Clemson to 28 wins in his last two seasons and to consecutive appearances in the national championship game.

Watson went 32-3 in his career as a starter, which is the best winning percentage for a quarterback in school history.

He finished his career third in Atlantic Coast Conference history with 12,094 yards of total offense and 90 touchdowns in his career.
