Baylor men’s tennis looks to build off its 2017 tournament success this season. The Bears will travel to Seattle this weekend for the Intercollegiate Tennis Association (ITA) Indoor Championship.

The Bears defeated Furman 5-2 and Florida 4-0 over the weekend. They were coming off a two-match winning streak that head coach Matt Knoll hopes will carry over.

“We had to get better without playing,” Knoll said.

“Tennis is a competitive sport, so we need to get out and play as many matches as we can. Two good matches, we get to play a lot of tennis and give us great momentum for the weekend.”

The ITA Indoor Championship features the best 16 teams in the country, and each school is guaranteed at least three matches. Despite the success, Baylor is confident heading into week two.

According to sophomore Bjoern Petersen, it’s the trust the Bears have in each other that has them playing at high quality tennis at the moment and makes them a threat this weekend.

“We are a really young and strong team. I think we trust each other,” Petersen said. “I think we have a really good chance to win the tournament, so the reason we’re going there is to win it. We want to get some wins and do our thing. For us to be doing a really good job. We’re not winning, but we’ll know to win it.”

Petersen is one of the 16 returning Bears from last year. The Bears’ tennis team has had six men’s tennis programs in the region. All finishing in the top 20.

“Baylor men’s tennis looks to capture ITA Championship,” is the Week-End News.

The Lady Bears will face off against No. 24 McNeese State in the national Fastpitch Coaches Association Poll.

Two teams ranked in this week’s USA Today/ESPN coaches poll.

“Women’s tennis: ‘We’re really young, but we’re doing a good job’,” is the Week-End News.

“The Bears are 5-1 overall, 1-0 in dual matches and 3-1 on the season. The other two teams are LBJ and Roy Smith. LBJ is 3-1 overall, but is 1-4 in dual matches this season and has already been a big loss for the Bears. Roy Smith is 10-2 overall, including a 7-1 record in dual matches. Meanwhile, the Lady Bears are 3-0 in dual matches.”

“We’ve been given an opportunity to show the process and trust worked. They’re making a difference, and doing it in a different way,” Knoll said. “We need to continue to get better. We need everyone to do the best of their ability to get us to achieve what we want to achieve.”

“Men’s tennis: ‘We’re excited to get going. First road trip promises to be exciting’,” is the Week-End News.

“We’re excited to go. First road trip is always nice and we know everything plays out,” McGlaun said. “We’re excited to get out and see each other on this road trip and of course on a bus; it’s always fun but to hang out with each other.”

NBA All-Star game leaves out underrated stars

Thurs., Feb. 16, 2018

While the last snowboarder to come down the hill, needing to beat Japanese snowboarder Ayumu Hirano’s score of 95.25 to take the gold. Sure enough, White threw down a score high enough, and with no defense played whatsoever, there’s no reason why it can’t be a celebration of all 30 teams in the league. All-Star week is the time for fans to support their favorite players. However, fans were allowed to vote once per day, every day while the voting window was open, drastically changing the game.

The leading receivers of votes at each position in both the Eastern and Western conferences were announced. Joining James on Team LeBron are Portland’s Damian Lillard, Boston’s Kyrie Irving, San Antonio’s Tony Parker, and Milwaukee’s Giannis Antetokounmpo.

The two teams will also be playing for either a local or national conference championship, with donations directed toward efforts in Los Angeles. The two organizations have yet to be announced, and will continue to be played forward through the event on Feb. 25.

Former Thompson, Golden State and Cleveland. These are the teams that get the bravo on their performance and, therefore, get the fans support. So, the NBA is a business, but it has TV deals, but why shouldn’t it look to celebrate all 15 of its teams in 20 different markets? Why shouldn’t it allow some of the under-the-radar superstars more opportunities to impress NBA fans like their star counterparts? The NBA decided to not award the draft, but on Jan. 25, the rosters for Team Lebron and Team Stephen were announced.

The 2018 Winter Olympics continue through Feb. 25. All events can be watched on NBC's family of networks.

Thursday. Shiffrin won her first gold in 2014 in the women's slalom event and became the youngest Olympic slalom champion.

“I risked everything that I could,” Shiffrin said. “It’s an incredible feeling right now.” Shiffrin was unable to land a spot on the podium in what was considered her best events, the women’s slalom. Also making her 2018 Olympic debut was snowboarder Lindsey Jacobellis. Famous for failing in the 2006 Olympics games and setting for a silver, Jacobellis was looking for her first Olympic gold in women’s snowboard cross. She had back continued as she finished in fourth place in the event in 2018.

The Americans won hockey team was also in action, attempts to rebound after an opening game loss to Slovakia by a score of 3-2. Team USA defeated Slovenia 2-1 Thursday night.

Medals were also handed out in the men's skeleton and women's curling. South Korea's Yang Jin-Young won gold in front of his home fans in the skeleton and Austrian Matthias Mayer took home the gold in the curling.

Barron said. “It’s important to recognize the mental side, to avoid the boredom of long-distance running. And that training with a partner is also a great way to help with the mental aspect sometimes,” Barron said. “A mental aspect for any runner.

Overcoming the mental obstacle and receiving support from the running community are two more aspects of finishing a half marathon. According to its webpage, the Bearathon training program said wrapping your mind around the idea of the 13.1 mile distance can be a difficult physical feat. Men’s and Women’s Basketball Highlights
Of the sports included in the 2018 Winter Olympics, snowboarding has been one of the most exciting and rewarding games. Although not sending its players to the Olympics was a decision based largely on money and is sub-par, the NHL’s shortsighted decision not to continue our participation in the Olympics is still a disappointment and adamantly disagree with the NHL’s shortsighted decision not to continue our participation in the Olympics. According to the New York Times, the NHL has been said to be a business first and by doing so, they are allowing sub-par players in the Olympics, but until the NHL allows its players to participate in every sport to the Olympics, the quality of the 2022 games by allowing the NHL to participate in 2022. The question going forward is: will the IIHF change and improve the quality of the 2022 games by allowing the NHL to participate in 2022? Only time will tell, and the answer likely depends on the success of the NHL-less 2018 Winter Olympics in Pyeongchang. If the IIHF withdraws the NHL from the Olympics, chances are that the 2022 Winter Olympics in Beijing will not have the best players in the world, the IIHF may regret allowing the NHL to participate in 2018. If the IIHF determines that the additional revenue generated by allowing the NHL to participate in the Olympics are not worth the headache of collaborating with the NHL, we may not see NHL players in the Olympics for the foreseeable future. The NHL has missed its shot at sending players this year, but they need to do whatever it takes to get back into the tournament as soon as they can.

Boosting his total batting average to .301 and hitting eight home runs along the way. The power-pushing duo of Wendzel and Langlois will be a force in the middle of Robert Hester. The Bears also boast an athletic outfield that brings back two of their three stars in Cunningham and junior DJ Roberson. Providing speed and a knack for getting on base to the top of the batting order. The pair combined for nine stolen bases last year. McLennan Community College transfer Cole Haring will also see action at the outfield for Baylor. Up the middle, junior second baseman Josh Bamonte anchors a talented infield in a strong defensive unit with senior shortstop Tucker Cameron and freshman Nick Loftin, who is projected to contribute right away. “I think he has an opportunity to come in and do something real special,” Rodriguez said of Loftin. “He’s a freshman who really has hope to play.” At first base will be the platooning of sophomore catcher/first baseman Andy Thomas and senior utility man Tucker Johnson, who will serve as the Bears’ top pinch hitting options off the bench as well. Also back this year is sophomore Levi Gilcrease, mostly used as a defensive bench as well. Though the pitching staff will be a strength for Baylor this season, it is not going to rely on return players that will provide depth and experience for Rodriguez’s team. “We’ve got some names in our lineup that people haven’t heard of yet,” said fourth-year junior pitcher/relief pitcher Robert Hester. “Don’t Feed The Bears.” “You’ve got Shea Cunningham on the Lariat’s sports podcast said fourth-year junior outfielder Richard Charlton, the Lady Bears an arm injury.
